"Jean Sauvion produces some attractive examples [of Loire Wines] at remarkably low prices," comments Frank Prial, wine editor of The New York Times.

The wines we list below are from the much heralded firm of Sauvion et Fils, headed by our dear friend Jean Sauvion, who is affectionately known as the "Wine Wizard of the Loire."

MUSCADER "LA NOBLERAIE" 2002

Sauvion A fresh, crisp and outstanding Muscadet, this wine has been bottled "sur lie" or on its lees to impart added flavor and complexity. A slight petillance on the palate gives this Muscadet an appealing liveliness. (4462)

QUINCY "LES GLANEUSES" 2002

Sauvion Made from the distinguished Sauvignon Blanc and similar in style to Sancerre. It is very dry with refreshing acidity. (4440)

SANCERRE "LES BRULIS" 2002

Jean Sauvion An aromatic and elegant wine, this full-bodied Sancerre displays an uncommon finesse. Exotic bouquet of jasmine mingles with herbaceous fruit and lively flavors. (4463)

SANCERRE "LES FONDETTES" 2001

Sauvion "Once Sancerre was the bistro wine of Paris...The Sauvion family...is expert when it comes to the Sauvignon Blanc grape," observes Frank Prial. (4465)

VOUVRAY "VALLEE DE LA LOIRE" 2002

Sauvion Here is an easy to drink, fresh, soft and smoothly-textured wine made from the Chenin Blanc. Honeyed fruit and floral aromas make this Sauvion Vouvray very refreshing. (4474)

LOIRE RED & ROSE WINE

BOURGUEIL 2002

Jean Sauvion An elegant, peppery and aromatic red made from the Cabernet Franc. It displays ripe raspberry and cherry fruit, violet nuances and soft, pleasing acidity. (4427)

ROSE DE LOIRE "CHEMIN DES SAULES" 2001

Sauvion A charmingly fresh and sprightly rose with berry fruit flavors. Delightful for spring entertaining. (4477)

■ Ten million dollars' worth of inventory hints at the "mind-boggling" number of labels at this "upscale" East Side "institution" that's rated the Survey's No. 1 Wine Shop thanks to its "deepest selection" of "hard-to-find" bottles, including old Bordeaux and Burgundies; a "suave, informed" staff, "catalogs that are works of art" and a sophisticated, "civilized" atmosphere fuel its "great snob appeal," though truthfully there are plenty of inexpensive options too.

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

"We Go The Distance For You"

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in you becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

A Typical Story Of How Hamptonites Deal With Charity Events

By Dan Rattiner

OPEN HOUSE the sign said.
"What do you think?" she said.

He downshifted the Boxter from third to second, put on the right blinker and scooted up the gravel driveway toward the massive mansion at the far end of the newly mowed lawn.

"I guess you like this," she said.

He said nothing, but he smiled.

A woman came out the front door and greeted the young couple in front of the garage. She wore jeans and a DKNY t-shirt. Behind her, an older man followed, wearing tennis shorts. Both of them smiled. They smiled a lot as it turned out, and kept on smiling through the entire encounter with the strangers who came up their driveway. Sometimes, they would finish each other's sentences. They'd chuckle along with the smiles when they did that.

"We've had three people look at the house this afternoon, but so far, no offers," the DKNY woman said.

"Come on in and look around," the tennis shorts man said. They would have guessed he was about sixty, the DKNY lady probably fifty but looking younger.

The young couple got out of the car and came around. They didn't say a word to one another but they exchanged glances at one point. Both of them knew. This was the place.

"The house was built for Morton Fleet, the investment banker, in 1904," tennis shorts said. "It's a Stanford White. As you can see, a wraparound front porch, turrets, three chimneys."

"Let's go inside," DKNY said.

And so they did. They wandered through a spacious front hall with a library on one side and what used to be called a great room on the other. There was a dining room and kitchen.

up there.

"It's really a very sensational house," Boxter said. "And you're asking $8.2?"

"We'd really take $7," tennis shorts said. He continued smiling but there was sadness in it.

"We need the money," DKNY said.

"Business reversal?" Boxter asked.

"Oh no. It's last week's fundraisers," tennis shorts said.

"There were just so many," DKNY said.

They were standing, at this point, at the top of the grand staircase. A chandelier hung down from the ceiling above the landing there. A bow window looked out over a copper beech tree that occupied much of the front lawn.

"You'd never think they would have so many fundraisers in the first week in June," tennis shorts said.

"There was the Hamptons Concours d'Elegance Classic Auto Show on Friday, Saturday and Sunday in Bridgehampton to benefit the South Fork Breast Health Coalition," DKNY said, "the Garden Gala for the Body Positive in East Hampton on Saturday at 5 p.m., the annual Planned Parenthood Benefit in Southampton at 5:30 p.m. Saturday, and the Heart Gala and Wine Auction of the Hamptons for the American Heart Association Benefit in Water Mill at 6 p.m. that same

"You'd never think they would have so many fundraisers in the first week in June," tennis shorts said.

Out back was a tennis court and pool.

"Care to go upstairs?" DKNY asked.

"We can use the servants' stairs or the great winding staircase in the front hall," tennis shorts said.

They opted for the front hall staircase. Upstairs were three baths and five bedrooms. The servants' stairs went up to an attic floor. The young couple chose not to see the rooms

How To Avoid A House On The Montauk Highway In East Hampton

By Dan Rattiner

At nine-thirty that morning, I was leaving East Hampton heading for Water Mill when I arrived at the back of a big traffic tie-up just past the Jewish Center on Woods Lane.

Boy, all these people going back to the city on a Monday morning, I thought.

Then I realized it was Tuesday, not Monday. There has got to be an accident or something up ahead.

By this time, I was passing, at three miles an hour, the East Hampton Animal Hospital and was in sight of the Red Horse Market complex on the right side of the road. The road curved here and I could not see too far beyond that. But it didn't look good. I looked at my watch. 9:35. I was supposed to meet somebody at Danny's Fairway Cafe in Water Mill at 9:45. At this rate, I would not make it. I might miss the meeting all together.

Now, before I continue, I would like to say that I have never, ever published an accurate description of the back road shortcuts that all us locals know in this newspaper. One time, fifteen years ago, I did write an article announcing that all the shortcuts would be revealed and there were indeed three of them. Southampton to Bridgehampton, Water Mill to East Hampton, Bridgehampton to Amagansett. But each one of them ended with exactly the same sentence.

"Turning right at the big rock you now find yourself on a straight road heading down toward the beach. Put the accelerator to the floor so that when your car gets to the high dune at the back of the beach, you've got up enough speed to clear the bathers before splashing down in the Atlantic Ocean."

Fifteen years ago there was no politically correct behavior and you could write stuff like this. Today, you'd get sued. A reader would say It's only about three miles worth. Just 5% of the whole way. Consider it a sneak preview. But that's it. You'll have to beat any more out of me.

Anyway, so I am in this traffic jam and to make tracks to Danny's I think what I have to do is go along the shoulder of the road on the right until I get to the Red Horse Market complex, go into the parking lot there and out the other side, then do a little zigzag from Cove Hollow Road onto Buckskill Road and before heading up Buckskill Road in the general direction of Sag Harbor. In the traffic jam, people are waiting patiently. But I've got to get where I'm going. I'm not going to get there standing still like this.

And so, I cut through the Red Horse Market complex, turn right onto Cove Hollow, and am about to turn left on Buckskill when it occurs to me that I have no idea where Buckskill is going to take me. And I have no map handy. I could get very lost up in the woods in back of Dune Alpin there. A better course of action would be to continue on along Cove Hollow until I get to Route 114, turn left on that, go up to Steven Hands and turn left on that and come back down again to the Montauk Highway but about a half mile further up.

I would like to say that I have never, ever published an accurate description of the back road shortcuts that all us locals know in this newspaper.

---

he followed the instructions and nearly got killed and you owe him six million dollars.

But that's another story.

I mention this because at this point I am actually going to reveal, for the first time, some back roads that get you around things out here.

Hell

I have no idea if I will have gotten past whatever is holding things up, but in either case the idea is a winner. If the jam is still there, I can go along the shoulder again for just four hundred yards and then turn up on Daniel's Hole Road toward the airport, go under the railroad trestle, turn left on Industrial Road and come down again to the Montauk Highway at Wainscott Northwest Road between the bagel store and Windows and Walls. I'd surely be past whatever the problem was. Maybe. Anyway, I could worry about it then.

So I go straight on Cove Hollow, up 114, turn left on Steven Hands and come back down to the Montauk Highway, which I can see from just a hundred yards away as I approach has

ABSOLUTELY NO TRAFFIC. Whatever it is, I have passed it. I pull up to the stop sign. I have my blinker on. And as I come to a halt, the biggest damn house you ever saw, resting on railroad ties and wheels, comes slowly across my bow, pulled by trucks, accompanied by state police cars with flashing lights and motorcycle officers and I am stopped cold. They got me again.

I look at my watch. 9:41. They are moving a big house from one lot to another here in the Hamptons, a time honored business that stops all traffic, ties everything up and is a whole day's worth of excitement. The house and the police cars and the front of the traffic jam now parade by me. I go to plan B. Which is to scoot slowly and carefully down the shoulder of the road to ultimately make a right onto Daniel's Hole Road as if I am heading for the airport. I put on my right blinker so everybody knows what I am about, and I accelerate onto the shoulder, going fifteen miles an hour, twelve miles an hour faster than the house and the parade behind it. Slowly I gain on the house. But as I do, one at a time, four other cars in the main line in front of and to the left of me put on their blinkers and also go over onto the shoulder of the road in front of me. They are going to make the turn too. The police look at all these cars. It's a legal move, sort of. They nod, they understand. All four cars turn right, I follow.

The lead car goes up a short distance, puts on his left blinker — there is no turn at this point — and makes a full u-turn and stops. Inside, a man and a woman are debating what they have just done and what is now being undone. We drive by.

I am thinking there are now three cars in front of me and we are all going a mile to just past the railroad trestle, to a left onto Industrial Road and I am wondering if all three cars are going to be making that turn. I hope not. I am in a hurry, and don't want them there at the end to hold me up when I come to the place where I turn back onto the Montauk Highway. Also, the parade of three cars in front of me is going very slowly and this is irritating me too. It seems that the people in the new lead car are having second thoughts. They are slowing, but they are not stopping. They are arguing.

In this way, at about twenty miles an hour (in a thirty mph zone), we travel under the railroad trestle where, immediately, there is the left onto Industrial Road running parallel to the Montauk Highway. The first two cars go straight, which is further into the woods into Daniels Hole Road hell where you can easily get very lost and have no idea how to get anywhere. But the third car, the car directly in front of me, a Jeep Cherokee, makes the turn and quickly accelerates to light speed onto the long straightaway of Industrial Road heading west.

He is really moving here, happy to be free of the two doofuses who have gone straight, which makes me happy too, but on the other hand I am worrying that too much time has passed and that when I arrive back at the highway, the house will have beaten us to it again.

Or maybe the guy in the jeep will sneak through and I, behind him, will get stopped. We will soon see. There is also the possibility that he will go straight past Wainscott Northwest and off into Industrial Road dead-end hell like the other doofuses, but no, he doesn't, he turns, and I follow, about four lengths behind.

We race down Wainscott Northwest now, a winding road, hoping and praying we have beaten the house. He's in front of me about three car-lengths and I am doing all I can to keep up with him. We pass the yellow sign that says SLOW DEAF CHILD, looking left and right, and we pass the former Disney Imagineering facility that Bran Ferren founded. We pass the sand pit on the left and there it

Riverhead's Decision, The New York Times, And The Media

By Dan Rattiner

This newspaper goes off to the printer around midnight on Tuesday night every week. This is done electronically. We click on a mouse. A file goes to the printer. After that, unless somebody shouts "stop the presses," something that is very likely not going to happen since we are printed near Philadelphia, that, is what you are going to read when the paper comes out.

For this reason, a week ago Tuesday evening we sent a reporter to Riverhead to sit in on a very important meeting there, at which a decision was to be made about whether a Woodstock-type concert would take place in Calverton this past weekend. It was a last minute thing. We thought we could get the decision in before we went to press. We couldn't.

"They've reserved decision until the morning," our reporter said. "They are going to issue a press release at ten a.m. I've been here five hours. All these people were here five hours. Now the town board has left and everyone is chanting bullshit! bullshit!"

"For or against?" I asked.

"Against," he said. "Can I go home now?"

As I am sure you know, the board unanimously voted no to the concert, noting in their press release that they were in favor of it but their little police force could not handle the crowds and the county and state police, though initially saying they would help out, now said they wouldn't and so having the concert was unsafe. In other words, though they were telling the truth as they saw it, they were really angling their decision so as not to get sued

At 11 p.m. Tuesday, however, none of this was anything I was thinking about. I was thinking about what to put in the space about the concert. And for a brief moment, the thought flashed through my mind that maybe, just maybe, the board had reserved their decision because they were going to vote in FAVOR of the rock concert and didn't want to get attacked by an unruly crowd in the court room.

It was a wild thought and total fantasy. I was thinking maybe money had been passed under the table, although in forty-three years of running this newspaper I have never encountered a situation where politicians accepted money under the table for anything. But there it was in my mind nevertheless, and, as it turned out, it was totally untrue.

I mention this story because readers have to know how hard it is for newspaper people to learn the correct information, even if there is correct information, which often there is not, and this concept very much relates to what has just happened at The New York Times.

At the Times, six weeks after the scandal involving reporter Jayson Blair, the top editor there and his second in command have re-by the promoter. Two hours later, the promoter said the concert would be held at Giant Stadium in the Meadowlands and that he would likely sue Suffolk County. Thus, and probably more importantly, Riverhead averted a decision whereby 50,000 concertgoers, many of whom were already on the road from Tennessee, Nebraska and California, might be here and throwing bricks through store windows for the weekend.

signed. Blair, as you know, was that Times reporter who filed about 199 inaccurate stories, many of which involved descriptions he made up, all of which were published, at which time he filed a 200th inaccurate story, got caught, and then they found the previous 199. He'd been writing fiction as fact for a year and a half. He got fired.

Oh, there was such sniffling and crying in the New York office last week, five weeks later, as Executive Editor Howell Raines and Managing Editor Gerald Boyd resigned.

"I want to thank you for the honor and privilege of being a member of the best journalistic community in the world," Howell Raines said in his farewell speech.

No other newspaper in the world would make such a statement. Not the London Times, not La Republica in Rome, not Le Figaro in Paris. All of them, in fact, all the other great newspapers everywhere else in the world besides the United States, are read with great skepticism. These papers all have a point of view. Many have their own personalities. People know this and love them and read them anyway.

Americans wonder why people elsewhere hate us. The reason is that though it is true we have the best political system in the world, we actually believe we are better people than anybody else because of it. We are honorable. We are accurate. Everybody else is not.

When The New York Times discovers they have been printing inaccurate articles in the NEWS pages, it is time for a great weeping and wailing. Everyone counts on accuracy from The New York Times. Throw out the bums who have been found to be inaccurate or responsible for those inaccuracies for 200 articles in a row.

This newspaper believes the problem is upside down. It is not that people have been found to be inaccurate. It is that The New York Times and others truly believe it is possible for there to be accuracy. They have the "News" pages for accurate information and the "Op-Ed" pages for opinion. Never the twain shall meet. And readers are expected to believe that. That is the problem.

Americans forget the reason we have the best political system in the world is because our government was created to account for inaccuracy. People are inaccurate. They are also greedy, power hungry, lascivious and have many of the other human sins. They lie. They don't do their homework. That is why our founding fathers created the checks and balances in our system whereby the executive, legislative and judicial branches all have the ability to pull the rug out from under those who misbehave in the other branches. That and only that is our great strength.

American newspaper editors (and overly serious TV anchors) are the only people in the media who believe the truth is out there and the public should expect it from them. It is often not out there. So often what is put out there today as truth is found by historians to be what the PR people put out at the time. One tries. Newspaper people do try and they should. But they should never claim they should be trusted to have gotten it one-hundred percent right.

That is why, in the newspaper world, the events we pursue are called "stories." Everybody has a different one. And every newspaper in America publishes them, more or less, depending upon the ethics of its publishers and editors. The New York Times was publishing a lot of inaccurate stories. With newer editors, they will still publish inaccurate sto-

Sitting Around Talking About Cars And Parking In The Hamptons

By Dan Rattiner

If you lay low, enjoy the beaches, ride a bike everywhere, play tennis and read a book, the summer is fine. Otherwise, things can heat up. Here are four short stories, all about cars.

The first story involves the property next to mine on Bridgehampton's Main Street. I did a renovation about five years ago and put in a paved parking lot with the provision that if the neighbor ever did a renovation, I would agree to allow cars to pass back and forth between the parking lots. Two years ago, the neighbor, Urban Archaeology, did a major renovation, tearing down their old building and putting up a new one. When they had finished they had a nice paved lot in the back like mine, and they built an opening between the lots on which the Southampton Planning Board, which decides such matters, had them paint a big white arrow going from my lot to theirs so everyone would know it was one way. That way everybody would exit to the side of the Urban Archeology property, which is on a side street facing a church, and not onto the Montauk Highway, where we had been exiting before. Anyway, three weeks ago, Mr. Shapiro, who owns Urban Archaeology, came to my office and said he had something that concerned me to tell me about.

"I had an inspector from the planning board they will have cars towed away. I told her that her office had made us agree that on Sundays we would allow the church-goers across the street to park in our lot. We had no problem with this. We agreed. Now you're telling me if I am closed their cars will be towed away?

"She said — that's right. I told her that next door at Dan's Papers, the people there often work until two in the morning. I had to agree they could park in my lot as I can park in theirs. Now their cars will be towed away? And she said again that's right.

"She also said I had to remove the white arrow painted on the asphalt as they didn't want this to be a one-way entry and I said her office had just had us paint it there. She said I should come on YOUR property and put up a sign reading NO ENTRY into my lot and at that point I told her she had to leave and she did."

The next day I called the head of the planning department and told him the above. He told me he would look into it and would call me back. He come over to the property yesterday," he said. "I threw her off. I was very angry."

"Why did you do that?" I asked.

"It was nothing at first. She asked me the hours our business is open and I asked her why she needed that and she said that when Urban Archeology is closed, nobody can use my lot or never did. Last time I looked the white arrow was still there.

* * *

Last Sunday afternoon, I was lying on the sofa in my living room watching television. I had spent much of the morning in Water Mill, interviewing a theater director, after which I returned home to East Hampton by way of my office in Bridgehampton where I picked up some papers I had to go over.

People were at the house. We watched a movie and talked about going out in the boat.

Then the phone rang.

"Mr. Rattiner?"

"Yes."

The man identified himself as a police officer.

"You were just seen leaving the scene of an accident on Main Street in a white van. Why did you do this?" he asked.

"I am watching television," I told him. "You've got the wrong man."

"You were identified," he said, mentioning the owner of a store on Main Street. "A man with a white beard and a hat. Is that you?"

"Sounds like me," I said.

"Backed into a new Volvo. Drove off. You have a white van?"

"I drive a Navigator," I said. "Maroon."

"This white van is registered to you."

"Dan's Papers has a white van. Maybe it was that white van. But I've been out only once today, and it was in the maroon Navigator. I'm watching television."

"Why are you lying to me, Mr. Rattiner?"

"I'm not lying to you. Want me to tell you the plot of the movie I am watching?"

"There is a white van in your driveway. Go out and tell me what the license plate numbers read."

I figured this officer was across the street. Must be a white van in my driveway. I went out to have a look. No white van. I came back to the phone.

"There is no white van in my driveway."

"I have a positive I. D. on you, Mr. Rattiner. You want me to come up there with the witness?"

I thought, I know this store owner. We're just acquaintances. So what if he I.D.'s me?

"No," I said.

"Then come clean. It will be a lot easier on you."

And so it went. I asked if he wanted to talk to anybody in the house so they could confirm I had been there all afternoon and I drive a maroon Navigator. He said no. I thought — it's a month from now and I'm talking to a lawyer and he says okay I didn't do it, but there will be less jail time if I plead to a lesser charge. Then I take a deep breath. I ask for the officer's name, which he gives me, and I ask him for an apology. He says no, he is just trying to solve this case. And so it went.

"Who was that?" someone asked after I hung up.

"The police," I said.

"What did they want?" they asked.

"A confession," I said. "I didn't give it to them."

The following morning, the man driving the car, which was our company van, went down to the police station and said he was delivering papers on Main Street and he tapped this other car and put a note on the windshield and drove away. There was limited damage to either vehicle but the matter was turned over to the respective insurance companies. No charges were filed. The man, who works for us, has white hair and a white moustache. As the rain had just stopped, he was wearing a parka with the hood up.

Dick Cavett Hosts Hamptons Auto Classic And Concours

By Dan Rattiner and Catherine Gandel

Last week about a hundred and sixty car owners from all around the northeast packed up old sports cars, motorcycles, antique cars and other peculiar contraptions and made tracks for Bridgehampton, New York for the Hampton Classic Auto Show and the Concours d'Elegance. Some could be driven. Some had to be flatbedded. A few came in magnificent trailers of the sort you see taking racing cars to Daytona or Indianapolis. Some were shined and polished and looking absolutely brand new. Others were a little ratty around the edges. All were amazing.

The event lasts for three days here in a former potato farm field here in Bridgehampton. Friday, June 6 was arrival day, and a 50-mile tour of the back road for those in driveable condition. On Saturday, June 7, the cars were lined up in three long rows, just like in a shopping center parking lot, with those for sale marked as such, and with buyers wandering around in the tall grass looking for the owners. Sunday was reserved for a morning of ogling and a lunchtime grand judging.

Tom Bryant, Vice-President and Editor-in-Chief of Road & Track, was on hand to present one of the trophies. The sponsorship had been arranged by the magazine's New York marketing office. "We thought it was a good match for us," Bryant said, "considering that the magazine started out in New York (it's now published in Newport Beach, CA) and in 1950, we ran a cover story on the race through the streets of Bridgehampton."

The rain did impact the turnout to some degree, particularly at the auction on Saturday. Relatively few spectators watched as a 2000 BMW Z8 brought the top price, over $100,000.

JUDGING "THE BEST STORY I'VE HEARD TODAY"

By Dan Rattiner

There were about forty trophies given out in ten different categories at the auto show judging on Sunday, with a grand overall winner announced. The judges moved among the 150 cars knighting the owners of about a third of them with the knowledge of their upcoming award, and the winning cars were then started up, lined up as if they are in some sort of glistening and fantastic traffic jam and then, one at a time, driven up for their owners to receive their awards from TV personality Dick Cavett this year (he lives in Montauk), assisted by personal trainer High Voltage. There was a band, various tents occupied by sponsors of the event, a fashion show — Fashion as Influenced by the Twenties and Thirties, by Bonni Miller — and various exchanging of names and addresses and tearful farewells.

My job in all of this was to walk around the Cours during the morning ogling on Sunday and ask some of the various owners to tell me the best story they can think of about their car. I give a special award during the ceremony, and I tell the story. It's a nice job and I enjoy doing it. Personally, I've got a 1959 Triumph TR-3 sports car that I have owned since it was new (and I was new), but that's my story. I'm not eligible.

For the most part, the owners of these cars are obsessed with them, know all about them and have hundreds of stories they can tell you along with news clippings and photo albums to show which could each take up half an hour to wade through. For the most part, the owners of

Manhattan Beach, California had traveled the longest distance to show their fire engine red 1959 MG MGA 1600. (Later the car would take first prize in the Post-War Sports Car category.) When asked why they had come all the way across the country for this event, Taylor said, "It's all about meeting people."

Well, maybe. But what a concours is really all about is the cars, and every car has a story. Jerome Jacalone was at the Bridgehampton Historical Society on Friday afternoon, ready to participate in the 50 mile tour of the highways and byways of the Hamptons. His 1970 American Motors AMX is what he called a "survivor": unrestored, undamaged, looking exactly as it did when its original owner drove it out of the dealership 33 years ago.

The event benefited the South Fork Breast Health Coalition, a local grassroots organization founded in 1994 and dedicated to helping East End women diagnosed with breast cancer, to educating women about the importance of self breast exams and annual mammograms, and also to finding the causes of the high incidence of breast cancer in the area. The funds raised over the weekend will go to the "Neighbors Helping Neighbors" program, developed to help patients and their families cope with some of the day to day stresses of the disease.

Former talk show host Dick Cavett was the emcee of the awards ceremony. The "Best in Show" award went to a 1935 Amilcar owned by Malcolm Pray of Greenwich, CT. Tom Bryant gave the "car Road & Track editors would most like to drive home" award to a 1961 Corvette. The Kensington Motor Group gave an award for the "car with the most significant provenance" to the Hansgen Special. The Hansgen Special also won an award given in honor of the late Bob Akin, a Montauk resident and former race car driver. The "car Bob Akin would have most wanted to drive" award was presented by his son. Dan Rattiner of Dan's Papers gave an award for "the best story I've heard today" to a gussied-up Jaguar. All of the trophy winners went home with a magnum of champagne courtesy of Champagne Mumm.

Ancillary activities during the weekend included an auction of jewelry, watches, silver and china, an exhibition of automotive art, and a fashion show.

But in the end, it was all about metal and machines. One guest, when asked why he braved the mud and rain probably answered for everyone else in attendance. "I just love the cars," he said.

Heard

these cars are male, and the women who accompany them long suffering, as in "now that's the LAST of these cars you're going to buy, right?"

I say last of THESE cars, because, invariably, the obsession is about one particular car maker and one particular model that was made and about a particular year that that model was made.

So for example, the car lusted after and on the premises for Paul Iantosca of Needham, Massachusetts, was a 1971 Oldsmobile 442 muscle car convertible, the rare W-30.

Now most muscle cars are long since gone and dead because they were built in a very irresponsible fashion by Ford, Chrysler or General Motors in the late 1960s and early 1970s with wildly overpowered engines and wildly underperforming brakes and clutch plates. They've hit trees, gone off cliffs. This was before the age of mandatory seat belts too.

"I posted a note on 442.com," Iantosca told me as if, of course, anybody would do that. "I've had two of them. I told my wife I would never get another one UNLESS it was in the classic

Dr. Jill Morris Talks About The Deeper Meaning Of Dreams

By Clara Jablonski

Have you ever woken up from a dream but have no idea what it was that you were dreaming about? Or have you ever remembered just the tail end or a simple part of the dream? Or even better: have you ever had a night's sleep where you feel that you didn't dream at all?

If you answered yes to any of these questions then you are like those who assembled for a dream workshop led by Dr. Jill Morris, a psychoanalyst and dream analyst at the Romany Kramoris Gallery on Main Street in Sag Harbor. Dr. Morris, author of The Dream Workshop, Creative Breakthroughs and Transformational Dreaming, works as a psychotherapist in New York City as well as a lecturer at Cooper Union.

The group that joined Dr. Morris in the working studio below the Gallery, coined the "Underground Garden," gathered to gain some insight into the mysterious workings of their unconscious minds. And to their surprise, the group found that not only does everyone dream, but that dreams can give direction to their lives.

A few of the attendees found this notion rather puzzling, since so many of their dreams seemed to be random inconsequential pieces thrown together in a jumble. But Dr. Morris re-dream or element in a dream, like some of the participants had, it means that there is still a prior issue that has yet to be resolved.

Moreover, the complex language in dreams is multi-layered and can be understood on many levels, having multiple interpretations. But what the workshop group didn't realize was that since the person dreaming is actually creating everything in the dream, even other people in the dream may be fragments of the dreamer, or the dreamer's unconscious.

In addition, there is a strong connection between dreaming and memory, and creativity may be directly linked to dreams. As Dr. Morris said, "Creative people find their dreams provide the answers." This can be seen in Albert Einstein, who had a dream about sledding down a steep mountainside, going faster and faster until he was moving at the speed of light. After awakening, he meditated and realized that that dream would assist in his Theory of Relativity.

Alias Howe, the inventor of the sewing machine, was also given an answer from his unconscious through a nightmare.

assured them that even though the language in dreams may not be the easiest to decipher, it may contain vital information about hopes, fears and other unconscious elements of the mind.

For example, if a person is faced with an issue in their life that is bothering them, even if they are not aware of it, that subject may be found in their dreams. And if a person has a recurring

Alias Howe, the inventor of the sewing machine, was also given an answer from his unconscious through a nightmare. He had created the entire machine, but couldn't figure out where to put the eye in the needle. He went to sleep and dreamt that savages with spears were threatening him, ordering him to finish his invention. Interestingly enough, in the tips of their spears were eye-shaped holes.

These tales, along with others, can be explained though a theory that says that if a person is working with extreme dedication on a project or problem, their neurological processes continue even when they are sleeping. It's almost as if their unconscious minds take that sleep time to analyze and reorganize the information that they had been stewing over in their waking moments.

The group continued to listen to Dr. Morris' insightful information, asking questions left and right, hoping to find the answers to their own unconscious puzzles. They were told that back in the 1950s, Azarinsky discovered that we all dream four to five times a night (approximately every 90 minutes) by studying eye movements in sleeping babies and REM sleep in adults. Recent follow-up studies have proven that even twenty-week-old fetuses experience REM sleep. And while babies dream about 50 percent of the time that they sleep, the older people get, the less time they spend dreaming. An adult dreams about 20 to 25 percent of the time and by the time he or she is 60, it's down to 15 percent. By 70, every person will have spent the equivalent of about six years worth of time dreaming.

The question in the air in the Underground Garden at that moment quickly became why doesn't everyone find the answers to life's problems in dreams? Well, as Dr. Morris explained, some people don't care to remember their dreams. But the more people pay attention, the more they are able to remember. Also, dream diaries can be helpful, even if the writings are simple fragments written in the middle of the night or right after the person wakes up in the morning. Any element can be insightful, no matter how small. Also, there are techniques that you can use that Dr. Morris has included in her book, "The Dream Workshop," that can assist you on your voyage through your unconscious.

LEARN TO SAIL

It's Easy To Learn With Professionals

We have taught hundreds of people of all ages to sail - to enjoy the thrill of the wind moving a boat through the water and to experience the quiet beauty and relaxation of sailing.

The waters of Peconic and Gardiners Bay are a special part of the East End. They should be part of your enjoyment of the area.

Sailors are more interesting and more fun.

DO IT. YOU'LL LOVE IT.

Our two day beginner course is taught on 23 foot keel-boats. After the course you can rent a 23 foot sailboat. And you can follow the beginner course with more advanced courses.

YEEEEEE HAAAAAA...

1,000 Feet Above Westhampton Beach, Upside Down, Right Side Up, Upside Down...

By Joshua May

It was the tumble that blew my mind. I screamed like a little girl. I screamed at the top of my lungs, screamed until my voice cracked, screamed until I ran out of air, screamed until everything else other than the sound of my scream and the sensation of flipping head over heels through the air was all I knew.

It was one of those involuntary screams that fuses pure terror and pure joy and is produced only by the most surreal experiences. It was a skydiving scream, an oh-my-God-we're-going-off-a-cliff scream that the leading lady gives in a movie, a stunt-flying, head-over-heels, flipping-towards-earth scream. It wasn't even in the ballpark of one of those rollercoaster mini-screams. It was a monster scream and the tumble was awesome.

As we pulled out of the trick and the nose of the plane edged towards the horizon I was and master of this mind-blowing experience asked over the headphones.

"That was AWESOME!" I replied with a trembling voice. Or at least that's what I think I said. To be honest, I have to apologize at the outset for any inaccuracies about details and specifics because I literally couldn't think straight for about four hours after the flight. (Typical post-flight question: "So, um, Mike. Um, um, so... that was so cool.)"

Mike started flying gliders when he was eleven and soloed in an airplane for the first time when he was thirteen. He started his stunt-flying career with that flight, explaining, "I just started doing what a typical thirteen-year-old would do when they're alone for the first time in a plane. I started doing tricks to see what the plane could do."

That matter-of-fact attitude is pretty much panting, my stomach was still doing flips and I was smiling so hard my face hurt.

"How was that?" Mike Mancuso, the pilot

the norm for Mike, and he doesn't brag about what he's doing in the air, despite the fact that he's one of only a few pilots in the world pulling the tricks he does.

After getting his commercial pilots license, he embarked on a successful aerobatic career at the age of eighteen. In 1998 he retired from aerobatic competition to join the Northern Lights Aerobatic Team and performed with them until 2000. In 2001 he was back on the solo scene with his sponsor Klein Tools (apparently electricians swear by these tools and a few even have tattoos of Klein's logo — something about cutting into live wires and not getting electrocuted to death).

For the past couple years now Mike has been traveling to air shows, doing some stunt flying and occasionally teaching aerobatics out of his family's flight school, Mid-Island Air Service at Brookhaven Airport. He's also the official stunt flyer for Nascar and is scheduled to fly at a number of races this season. Only problem is that he's been grounded recently because he can't fly anytime the terror alert warnings reach orange. This weekend he'll be flying at the New York International Air Show at Stewart International Airport in Newburgh, New York. Hence the press package that landed on my desk last week.

I get a lot of press packages, but few offer stunt flying as an option. A couple quick calls and I was heading thirty minutes west from Bridgehampton to Brookhaven to jump in a plane.

Prior to takeoff, Mike showed me a video of some of the TV coverage he's received over the years and I got a glimpse of some of the stunts that we'd be performing in the air. General jitteriness quickly became downright nervousness and my vaguely dry palms began to sweat. A quick preflight plan to arrange for the photographs and we were headed out back to suit up and get into the air.

A brief introduction to the plane was completed — it's a Klein Tools Extra 300L, with a 300-horsepower engine, and constructed of tubular steel and carbon composite. All of that sounds very reassuring as you're strapping into a parachute, which you're required to wear by the FAA if you're going to exceed six degrees of tilt or pitch or something. (It was at this point that my brain began to shut down, so technical details will be suspect from here to the end.) Parachute on, Mike explained that I would only need it if "the plane is on fire, which will be obvious because you'll be on fire, and if the wing falls off and that's never happened before." Right, thanks for the tip.

Taxiing in a weaving S-pattern that was vaguely disconcerting — "Engines too high in the front so you have to weave back and forth and look out the sides to make sure there's nothing in front of you" — we made our way to the runway. Quick check of the instruments and we were off.

I'll never look at flying the same way again.

Takeoff: This is your captain speaking... not quite. More like drop the throttle, hear the engine that sounds like a drag racer revving and you're in the air in seconds. Gentle climb like an airliner? Nope. It feels like you're going straight up (in reality, it's probably more like 45 degrees).

Aloft: An accurate analogy is: 727 is to Jitney as 300L is to Ferrari. You crank turns, you don't bank turns. You feel the G-forces (we got up to 3.5 Gs on the flight and it felt like my cheeks we're being pushed into my throat). The view was unreal as we crossed the bay and began to make our way up the coast along the beach towards Westhampton Beach.

Tricks: "First we'll begin with an Aerilon roll." This is basically a corkscrew where the plane rolls to the left. It was fast, over in a second, but the first time you are upside down in an airplane, you remember it. Scream rating: a solid Wooo.

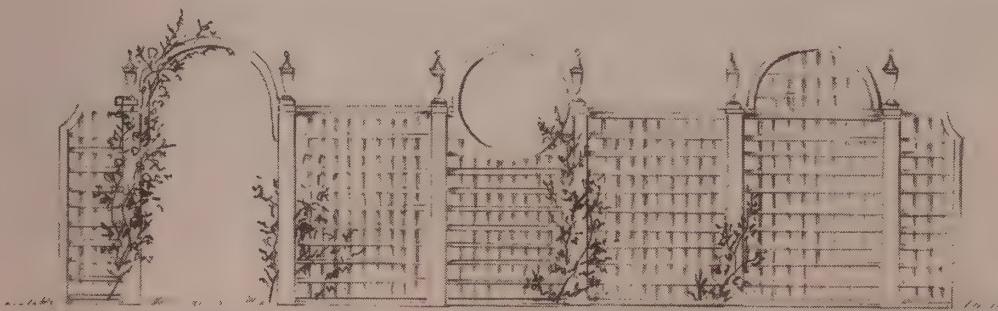

Next we did a roll with a quarter turn stop at each point. Scream rating: a solid Wooo.

Then it was time to go upside down for a bit. We flipped and "you just have to relax and enjoy it," Mike suggested. And I did. It was fantastic; my brain was trying to get around it and down below the waves were breaking along the beach and the fishing boats were trailing frothy white wakes behind them.

The Loop: This was great. You pull a few Gs

Observations of an Islander #252

Latest Darwin Awards

Watching the Tony Awards last night reminded me that it's been about two years since I did a column on the Darwin Awards. The Darwin Awards are given to those self-sacrificing individuals who contribute to humanity by leaving it. Here are some of the latest entries...

(October 2002, Ohio) It's a well-known fishing trick, put 12V electrodes into the ground and worms come to the surface. An Ohio man figured that 220V, 50Hz, would bring more worms out faster, and he decided to test his theory. Alas, he did so squatting on a steel bucket, holding an electrode in one hand with the other in the ground a few feet away...

(July 2002, Wisconsin) Two drunks were goofing around, when one challenged the other to shoot him with cigarette butts "to see what it would feel like." His friend loaded a gun with three cigarette butts, placing ammunition behind the butts to make sure they left the barrel of the gun. He then shot his friend from a distance of seven feet. The friend who issued the challenge died of two cigarette butts to the head, and one to the heart.

(7 March 2002, Colorado) When Mr. Gerald was pulled over by police for erratic driving, he decided to flee on foot. During the subsequent chase, Gerald attempted to dissuade officers from the pursuit by firing a 9mm semi-automatic handgun blindly over his shoulder.

While discharging the weapon over his shoulder, Gerald managed to shoot himself in the head, bringing the chase to a sudden conclusion.

(9 January 2002, New Zealand) A fisherman was swept away from the wild east coast beaches of Auckland, pushed to sea by 12-foot swells encountered after ignoring warnings of the impending danger. Onlookers could only watch the man standing and fishing as swells broke over his head in the wake of the oncoming gale. His body was recovered not far from the rocks. Another man earlier that year, had tied himself to the rocks to prevent being swept away, and was drowned by the incoming tide.

(2000, Oregon) A 24-year-old supermarket shoplifter stuffed a pair of live lobsters in his pants and sprinted for the door, but he never had a chance. The crustaceans brought the thief to his knees in front of startled cashiers when they fastened their powerful claws around his delicate parts. Doctors were able to remove the animals with pliers. They say the thief will fully recover — except for one small detail. "It was a do-it-yourself vasectomy."

(24 January 2000, Ohio) The Ohio police were hoping to locate a missing truck driver and his load of broccoli. The truck was located four days later. The driver's personal effects and seven bricks of marijuana were discovered in the cab of the vehicle. Shortly thereafter a patrolman noticed two feet protruding between the pallets of broccoli. The broccoli was unloaded as quickly as possible in the cold Ohio winter, leaving the frozen body of the driver standing precisely upside down, attached to the floor of the trailer by his head. The coroner's office determined that the man was trying to retrieve a stash of cocaine from between the pallets of broccoli when he fell and knocked himself unconscious and was soon frozen solid.

(1999, Nevada) A man was found dead in his residence, a victim of strangulation by of his 15-foot Python. The man was handling his pet when the snake mistook his hand for dinner and began swallowing his hand and constricting around his body. Snakes are solid muscle, and a python this size is far more powerful than any mortal man. The owner had failed to keep a knife handy. The man instructed his hysterical wife, who was too scared to approach the snake, to call 911. But the authorities arrived too late. It is to be hoped that the snake owner used his free arm to beat his helpless wife senseless before he died.

(June 1999, California) On Lake Isabella, a woman was having trouble with her new 22-foot Bayliner boat. It was sluggish in every maneuver, regardless of the power applied. She finally gave up and putted over to a nearby marina for help. A topside check revealed that everything was in perfect working order.

"So we're selling the house," DKNY smiled. "We're just plain out of money."

"There was also the Parrish Art Museum's Augustus Saint Gaudens exhibition opening in Southampton on Saturday," tennis shorts said.

"How much do you need?" Boxter asked.

"Well, we've looked at what's coming up," DKNY said.

"It's very, very, busy," tennis shorts said. "Just in the next three weeks there's the Designer Yard Sale to benefit juvenile diabetes on Saturday at 9 a.m. at Despatch Storage in Southampton, there's Diane Keaton at East End Books in East Hampton on Sunday, June 15 at 2 p.m. to benefit the Animal Rescue Fund, the Long Day's Night Gala at LongHouse in East Hampton on Saturday at 6 p.m. to benefit the LongHouse,

We figured we have to have $7 million."

"Would you take $6.3 million without a broker?" Boxter asked.

Tennis shorts and DKNY looked at each other and smiled. They weren't sure. How could they answer that?

"We'd really, really like the house," the young woman said.

"Well then, OK," tennis shorts said. "But on one condition."

"What's that?" Boxter asked.

"The gala for the Nature Conservancy is coming up on Shelter Island. We have to be in Des Moines for our daughter's wedding. You contribute $100,000 to that in our name."

"Deal," Boxter said.

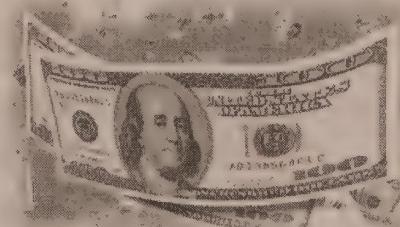

"Oh I'm so excited," the young woman said.

"And so are we," DKNY said.

"Yes we are," tennis shorts said. "And I'm going to run right out front and pick up that OPEN HOUSE sign."

"Care for some tea?" DKNY asked, cocking her head.

Story number three is about a man who was driving down the street last week just after one of the rainstorms, went through a puddle and accidentally splashed the guy driving a car the other way. The other guy had his window open, his arm on the door frame.

"It wasn't much," the splasher said, "and I was immediately sorry it happened, but then in my rear view mirror I see him turning around and he starts to follow me. I didn't know what to do. So I drove home, which was about two miles away, and I see him following me. I speed up as I get to my house, park in my driveway and I don't see him anymore. I go inside. But about fifteen minutes later there is a knock on the door. It is a police officer."

"Did you just splash another man with some water with your car and then drive off?" he asks. I say maybe I did and maybe I didn't. And I ask him if he is here to arrest me. He says no, but the other guy, who is parked on the other side of some hedgerows, has called the police on his cell phone and so they have come down to investigate."

You don't want to hear the rest of this story, but the bottom line is no arrests, no lawsuits, no trespassing."

Sheltered (continued from page 47)

One of the Marina guys jumped in the water to check beneath the boat. He came up almost choking on water, he was laughing so hard. Under the boat, still strapped securely in place, was the trailer.

(2000, Huntington, NY) A man was crushed to death on a stairway at the Sammis Real Estate while he was stealing the office's 600-pound safe. He apparently violated that cardinal rule of stealing safes: Never stand on a step lower than the one the safe is on. The safe was empty at the time of the incident.

And my personal favorite...

(17 September 2000, Queensland, Australia)

passing and nothing comes of it. Still, it's a sign of the times.

* * *

Last story. It took place five years ago, and I learned about it because I just told the above three stories to somebody.

"I have never forgotten this," he said. "I had a good friend who owned an orange Volkswagen bug. We go to the circus on the VFW property on County Road 39 and he parks his car and we go inside. Apparently he parks where the circus performers' parade comes along before going into the big top. We sit and watch it. Then there is a call over the public address system. Would the owner of an orange Volkswagen bug please come to the ticket office? We both go. What happened, we are told, is that the parade came by, skirted the car, but an elephant at the very back of the parade had to wait. So he sits down on the Volkswagen. Then he is called to proceed, gets up and ambles off into the big top. People see the sorry remains of the car, and feel a security guard."

"The two of us go see the car. It is kind of skrunched and the wheels are a little bent out, but we can get in and my friend puts in the key and it starts. We'll drive it home. Various papers are filled out and exchanged and we are wobbling down the highway when a police car pulls us over.

"You been in an accident?" he asks.

"No," we say.

"Looks like you've been fleeing the scene of a crime. No car looks like this without being in an accident. Let me see your license and registration. You sure you haven't just been in an accident?"

"We got sat on by an elephant," my friend said."

You don't need to know where this story ends either, but I'll tell you there were no arrests, no trespassing, no tickets and no lawsuits. They got home safely, apparently. And it's another sign of the times.

We sure live in the "fabulous" Hamptons.

configuration — red with a white top and upholstery and interior. And I get this call from a man who says his neighbor has one. His neighbor is 82 years old and has had it since it was new. Can you imagine that?"

Mrs. Iantosca was polishing the chrome as he told me this.

Well, there are the fanatics, and, increasingly, although they are still in the minority, the multi-millionaires who hire workmen to take care of a fleet of classic and antique cars which they keep as investments, selling high and buying low.

"A story?" one man told me. "Let me introduce you to Duncan here. He takes care of the cars. Knows all the stories."

So anyway, I walked up and down the three rows of automobiles in search of the best story that could be told to me that morning.

I looked at magnificent Cadillacs and Benzes from the Twenties and Thirties that were great stagecoaches with sofas in the back and smaller easy chairs up front where liveried chauffeurs could sit to operate these contraptions and cart their occupants about.

"This is a 1938 Mercedes originally built and owned by the formidable Swedish architect Max Gumpels. The car was German made, but Gumpels had the chassis removed from the frame and a one of a kind Swedish body put on it. He was quite a playboy. And quite flamboyant. The car has a siren which he used to announce his approach, and it has spotlights and that small but remarkable statue of the Roman Goddess of Love Diana as a hood ornament. The front seat, as you can see, is split sixty forty, so he could sit in the driver's seat and have his two girl friends sit next to him.

"As I'm sure you know, war broke out in 1939. He had a 65 gallon gas tank installed. No gas rationing for him. And he also wouldn't have to pull up to a pump very often. Also, we found on his first registration the phrase 'not to be confiscated by the military' stamped. A powerful fellow indeed."

There were some truly amazing automobiles here. There was a 1971 Lincoln Continental convertible that was about the length of a football field, I think. It was bought by Adam Salerno, whose father has a series of antique car dealerships in New England. This one he got at Lincolnland in Tampa, Florida, then had it flatbedded north.

There were several identical and very tiny Mercedes cars from about 1949 that looked like ladybugs with doors on the front that opened outward in front of you. Weird. And there was a 1953 Jag roadster racing car that race car driver Walter Hansgen built that year from a 1950 Jag body he put on a frame of his own design. Won all sorts of races in it, including the Watkins Glen Grand Prix, and he was in second place in 1952 here in Bridgehampton when races took place up and down the back roads at 100 mph plus, but which came to an end with Hansgen in that spot in this car and, elsewhere on the course, a car went off Sagaponack Road and killed some spectators. Street races were banned after that.

"I bought it in 1983," Robert Milstein of Briarcliffe, New York, told me. "It was pretty much a wreck in the woods. I restored it. It is currently still being raced. It won its class at Lime Rock last week driven by Murph Murberry. Hansgen, as you probably know, died during Le Mans in 1966."

Then there was Maureen Jones' 1920 Cadillac Victoria Coupe. You may have seen it around Sag Harbor. She uses it every day.

"It's probably the oldest continuously used car here today," she told me. "It was the same model car as was used a couple of years before it was built by General Pershing's troops during World War I. I bought it in Bingham, New York after World War II. It had been used as a

FEAR AND LOATHING IN RIVERHEAD

By Jonathan Small

As people from as far away as California ventured to Long Island, they came with the hope and excitement of seeing some of today's top bands at what would have been the largest concert in the history of the island. Unfortunately, this hope and excitement turned to anger and frustration and was met with equal amounts of anger and frustration — as well as relief — from the residents of Riverhead.

Even though Riverhead denied promoters a special event permit many knew that the event was doomed far before the town had the final say. Prior to last Thursday's decision, the Suffolk County Department of Health had already denied concert promoters a mass gathering permit due to safety factors stemming from lack of police involvement. New York State and county police departments refused to supplement the Riverhead police department, which would not have been able to supply adequate crowd control at the concert.

The scheduled venue, the old Grumman Air Force Base in Calverton, had been set up for the Field Day Music Festival when the town finally pulled the plug. The concert would have featured many musical performances including: The Beastie Boys, The Roots, Radiohead, Beck and Blur. Instead the concert was held at Giant's Stadium in the Meadowlands with a smaller lineup.

The blow was harsh for local commerce as many hotels had been completely booked.

"We were completely sold out for the entire week; we had to turn away a lot of other business. Fortunately, there are a lot of weddings in the area, so business was able to just barely survive," stated Dalia Torres from Riverhead's East End Best Western.

This seemed to be a common theme not only with hotels in Riverhead but also with many other hotels throughout Long Island. The restaurant business was also hit hard, as they had expected a large influx of customers. Not only did this influx not occur but regular business also suffered because many citizens of Riverhead, in preparation for the concert, had left the town, hoping for some serenity.

For other members of the Riverhead community, the canceling of the concert came as a relief. For weeks the citizens of the town had been fighting promoters, claiming that the inadequate police presence made them very uneasy about the safety of the concert. Many expressed fears of possible violence at the concert, desecration of a nearby cemetery and even the possibility of a terrorist attack. At a recent town meeting, these fears were voiced by many Riverhead citizens, urging the town board to cancel the concert.

For many angry concertgoers, Giants Stadium may not have been a reasonable alternative. It is tough to blame them because the show is after all getting cut in half so that it can fit into a one-day event. In addition, ticket holders with Calverton tickets could not gain admission. Although their tickets are being refunded, many people just refused to even bother going.

"Field Day should now be called Stadium Day. No way man, I'd rather spend eighty bucks in New York City and party with my friends. Down with Stadium Day," expressed one angry concertgoer.

Even former Long Islanders were displeased with the concert's cancellation. One man even went so far as to say, "Thanks for reminding me why I left Long Island."

In the wake of this failed concert, the only winners were East Enders. They avoided a huge battle, as they did not have to fight additional traffic that the concert would have caused.

Another rock concert has been scheduled for the month of August. The upcoming concert is scheduled for Calverton as well, giving promoters and law enforcement officials sufficient time to learn from their mistakes. I for one, however, will not be rushing to Ticketmaster anytime soon.

KNEW PROOPHREEDAR AT DAN'S

Now while most of you out there might know him as the National Spelling Bee runner-up, we here at Dan's Papers know Bobby Flop as something more, a friend and a colleague.

Recently, avid readers of Dan's Papers may have noticed quite a few spelling blunders, but do not fear fans, our proophreader is finally back. Minutes after coming in second in the spelling bee, Bobby was on a plane headed straight for the Hamptons.

"I am very excited to have almost won the competition, but my real passion is proofreading at Dan's," Bobby explained with two thumbs up. Flop, 12, is the youngest employee at Dan's, but despite his age, here he's just a regular guy.

"Bobby is phenomenal. Yea, on paper he might still be a little kid but once you meet him you realize that this is not a regular kid, he's kind of like Doogie Howser," states Lise Viser.

I recently got to understand all this Flop madness after Bobby finally had time to correct something which I wrote. At first I was nervous he would destroy my writing, he is after all, the best. But my fear soon turned into joy as I watched the master work his craft. I was in awe of his grace and stunning command of the quill. With every correction, I felt as if I was reaching closer to Nirvahna.

When it was finally over, I was left feeling somewhat empty. Bobby had drained me but in turn had made my work flawless. When I asked Bobby how this made him feel, he shrugged his shoulders and said: "Pococurante, P-O-C-O-C-U-R-A-N-T-E, pococurante... ha, I finally got it right."

Bobby Flop is certainly a man of few words. Unfortunately he declined an interview for the paper, stating that he just didn't care. I find Bobby's indifference ironik because after all, it is this apathy which nearly led him to greatness.

Indeed, I have no argument with newspaper people trying. See how we tried with Riverhead. But to claim "news" goes over here and "opinion" goes over there is asking too much from the public.

Answered Questions

This Week's Answer By:
Tom Wolfe

As for your query, concerning a favorite Hamptons activity: in my case, it's watching Grand Prix riders such as Joe Fargis and Candice King at ground level at the Hampton Classic. When the horse clears a six-foot jump and it hits the ground like a bunker bomb and your feet undulate from the tremor wave.

-Tom Wolfe

*Tom Wolfe is a prolific writer who divides his time between the Hamptons and New York. His many works include The Right Stuff, Bonfire of the Vanities and numerous magazine pieces that have been featured on the pages of Esquire, New York, Harper's and many, many others.*

And An Another Answer By:
Caroline Upcher

My favorite activity in the Hamptons is reminding myself how lucky I am to live here year round so when it rains and rains and rains, I can feel smug and superior knowing that when the sun eventually returns, I will still be here to enjoy it. I am English and we know how to do rain over there. We know that it's the best thing in the world for the complexion and that's why the British make up for their lousy teeth with heavenly skin. We appreciate that rain is great for the farmers. No rain, no produce for those cutesy Hamptons farm stands. Think about it! And of course rain is great for landscaping – another favorite Hampton activity.

So when is the single best time I have had indulging in my favorite Hamptons activity? Simple. The start of the great Hamptons season: Memorial Day weekend 2003.

*Caroline Upcher lives and writes in East Hampton. She is the author of numerous books including Down By The Water and Grace and Favor.*

10 YEARS AGO IN DAN'S PAPERS: BIG PICTURE

It is time to look at the Big Picture. We start with the Little Picture. The Little Picture is whether you need a haircut or can fit into last year's bathing suit. Whether you notice we need more light bulbs in the house or are almost out of orange juice.

The Middle Size picture is deciding whether the beach house in Southampton is suitable for the summer. Or whether or not there should be a ferry between Amagansett and Rhode Island. And what could possibly be next for Woody and Mia?

Next is the Middle-Big Picture. Will Yeltsin survive? And who will next be nominated for the Supreme Court?

Finally, there is the Big Picture. Is the universe really expanding? When will the sun burn out? Looking at the Big Picture once in awhile helps put your life in perspective. There is something very relaxing about it.

For example, I read in the New York Times what scientists think happens to Stuff. It is not like the old days where you flush Stuff down the toilet, or put it in plastic bags and leave it outside and they cart it away. We all now know that Stuff doesn't end there, that it comes back even if you throw it away. We have to recycle.

Well, scientists now believe the universe might have a way to get rid of Stuff. If it does, then there is less of it. And, ultimately, there may some day be none of it. This is very disturbing news indeed. All of us are made of Stuff.

They are not quite sure. Dr. Leonard Susskind of Stanford University told the Times reporter "I don't know that this is going to be solved in the next ten years, but I do know that the solution is going to be exceedingly important."

It sure is.

The Times article sets the stage by describing the modern theories scientists now live by. According to the Quantum Theory and Theory of Relativity, energy turns to matter turns back to energy and just keeps going round and around. There is never more or less of anything anywhere.

An interesting sub-theory is that if we knew absolutely everything about everything (which we don't), we could predict where everything has been and where everything is going, chart the history of the past and future. This is the theory anyway.

About twenty years ago, scientists discovered the existence of black holes. No problem. Things go down black holes and seem to disappear. But they are down in there. The gravitational pull of black holes is so strong that even light goes down a hole, faster than the speed of light, so we can't see it. But it is still there.

Now, however, a brilliant English scientist named Stephen Hawking has shown that black holes emit a low-grade radiation. This radiation has been named after him. It is Hawking's radiation. Hawking postulated that the radiation over time gets stronger and the black holes get weaker. Finally, the black holes disappear.

One supposes, then, that Hawking's Radiation will be where all the Stuff is, but scientists don't think so. They are real good at tracking Stuff from mass to energy and back and they have been absolutely unable to detect any Stuff in the radiation. This is very, very alarming.

"It just doesn't look like this information can get out of the black hole without violating causality," a professor Paul Ginsparg of Los Alamos National Laboratory in New Mexico told a reporter from the Times. "Every time I think about this problem it drives me nuts."

Of course when scientists first realized that the Stuff is not in Hawking's Radiation they figured that maybe it is but they just couldn't see it.

Using mathematics, they began following things down into a Black Hole getting smaller and smaller on a three dimensional basis. But the complexity of it got out of control.

"It was the kind of thing you couldn't even simulate with a 21st century supercomputer," said Dr. Andrew Strominger, a theoretical physicist at the University of California.

Another approach was to try to reformulate quantum theory so it could include "contagious" truck during the war. Mike Barkowski of East End Auto in Peconic looks after it. Its name is "William."

In the end, I decided to give my prize to one of two people with very different cars who each had the same story. They came to get their cars because of a photograph.

Arlene Swenson of East Islip has a cream colored 1954 Kaiser Darin sports car, a rare thing indeed.

"I was at a car show in Connecticut," she told me, "and I came upon a photo of this unusual looking car in a frame in the trash. I decided I would have to have it."

She looked through Hemmings Motor News, then found it in an antique car magazine.

"I went to Chicago to look at it, but that was a different car from this one and was not in restorable condition. After I got back home, someone called to tell me there was another one in Chicago I ought to see but they hadn't told me about it because he was asking too much money for it. What they didn't know was there was a woman ready to pay that much money for it. Here it is."

The other car, and this was the one I chose as the winner, was owned by Bob Alexander of Allston, Massachusetts. It was a cream colored 1959 Jaguar Mark 2 Sedan with gold trim. I had never seen gold trim on a Jaguar before.

"I had had a stroke," Alexander told me, "and my wife Paula (polishing the gold) bought me a book about Jaguars. I think that book, and this car, saved my life. I was partially paralyzed, could not speak. Prospects were not good. The centerfold of the Jaguar book was of this car, a white Jag with this gold trim that was built in England, one of cal junk yard, using their computer data base, found it for me. It was in a junk yard in Connecticut. I went there and I bought it and over the next year and a half restored it. It restored me too.

"And then, I decided to have an unveiling of it. I brought it to a local Jaguar dealership in Connecticut, and I put it under a giant gold sheet at this big event where we would unveil it. I also, with the help of a well-to-do friend, had invited a man named Richard Hassen to come to America from England for the unveiling. Richard Hassen was an 18 year old boy who was working on the design team that created this car. His father was Sir Walter Hassen, the legendary man who made the famous V-12 Jaguar engine. Richard came and at the unveiling he was beside himself with joy. He could hardly believe what I had done. He inspected it from nose to tail and here in the trunk, here let me show you, he signed his name and the date, authenticating that this indeed is this car. So besides me, this car made someone else very happy too."

Hassan's signature is in black magic marker, under the floor carpeting of the trunk, on the sheet metal. I believe it is permanent magic marker. It is permanent as it can be.

just twenty of them, to debut at the New York Car Show in 1959. I thought I will focus all my energy on this car. I will find it, if it still exists, this specific car that was at the Car Show — I presumed it would be abandoned somewhere and I was right about that — and I will restore it and bring it back to life. # DRIVING "THE RANGE ROVER EXPERIENCE"

By Jonathan Small

Set on the 38 acre Akin estate, the Range Rover Experience in Montauk is exactly that, an experience. When Range Rover launched its new model in June, they began a campaign in which they travel to ten separate locations and invite a select group of people to participate in a true off-roading experience. Going along with their theme, the Spirit of Adventure. Participants are given the keys to a brand new 2003 Range Rover and along with a Land Rover certified instructor, embark on an hour and a half expedition through sand, water and woods. With my instructor, Kevin Hans in the passenger seat, I set off on a drive unlike any I had ever been on.

The journey began on the beach as a nice peaceful ride, but as we began to reach the tip of Long Island, I soon became aware of the Range Rover's superiority and off-road dominance.

The smooth beach terrain soon turned rocky and wet with large crevices strewn about up and down the shoreline. Our vehicle smoothly put these obstacles behind it. Suddenly, the price tag began to make some sense to me.

When we finally got back to the Akin estate, I was sad because I feared as if I was reaching the end of my journey, little did I know, it was just beginning. The ride was far from over.

This is when the real test for the Range Rover began. Land Rover had set up an off-road course through the woods, complete with twists, turns and sixty degree inclines. The vehicle once again handled the course as if it was a paved, straight road.

Finally, the experience was over. It was tough to get out of the $72,000 machine but after some coaxing, I knew I had to go. Getting into my '91 Pathfinder had never been so difficult.

For those of you who can afford it, the new 2003 Range Rover is nothing short of phenomenal. Hopefully someday, I can wipe the drool from my chin and climb into my own. But for now, the Range Rover Experience will just have to do.

For those of you who might not find off-road driving appealing, Land Rover also brings with them grilling demonstrations and an orchid growing workshop.

Whispers

With Gina Glickman

"Destiny's Child",
Destiny's Child superstar Beyoncé Knowles, performed live to kickoff The Official launch of MTV's Summer Beach House

Beyoncé is undeniably one of the world's biggest superstars. Inspirational, talented and beautiful, yet what clearly sets her apart? She is just as beautiful on the inside. How do I know? Well, I've interviewed hundreds of celebrities throughout my career, and Beyoncé really surprised me. After Beyoncé went through a full day of interviews and appearances, it was my turn to interview her at around ten o'clock in the evening. I expected the usual routine answers. Not Ms. B, she was extremely professional, and enthusiastic which is unusual for a big superstar after a long day of press... but she had a glow, a star quality very few celebrities have in person. I quickly learned that Beyoncé is a special soul, a genuine human being and when you meet her you feel it. If you're wondering, Beyoncé is her real birth name, she is actually named after her mother's maiden name, Tina Beyoncé.

After successfully starring in big Hollywood blockbusters such as Mike Myers' film, Austin Powers in Goldmember, it's no surprise this stunning young star has decided to go solo and create her own album entitled, "Dangerously in Love." Beyoncé told me, "When I started writing the album I noticed the similarities in the songs, they were about love and different steps in the relationships in love. From the time you just meet a guy, to the time you realize you really like him, to the time you realize you're possibly in love with them, to the first time you tell him that you love him, to the first time you make love, to the first time you realize that he is not all that you thought he is, to you having to love yourself. It's just a great story and I think anyone that's ever been in love or fallen in love or wants to be in love, you listen to what you can and live that experience."

Speaking of love, the latest rumors romantically link Beyoncé to rap giant Jay Z. One might assume her lyrics are all about their relationship, but Beyoncé told me she has many inspirations in her life. She says, "So many people inspire me. My younger sister Solange inspires me, my mother inspires me, and the girls inspire me, as in Destiny's Child. Beautiful music inspires me. The beach inspires me — I'll be here all day. My fans definitely inspire me."

Movies, music and now a solo career, Beyoncé takes her down time seriously. "My favorite thing to do is paint. I love to paint. I would never show anybody, well right now, I would never show anybody because I'm experimenting and I

GEORGE, THANK YOU.

You changed our lives.

Before we bought the Marquis Spa from you, our lives were completely boring. My husband was never home, he worked 18 hours a day at his law firm.

To keep busy, I jogged, joined volunteer groups, shopped 'til I dropped.

We never saw each other. It was terrible.

Since you installed the spa, our lives have really changed.

The warm water bubbling from those therapeutic heads completely relaxes us.

Look at this picture. We spent a fortune on different backdrops to fit our every mood. This one is a wooded lake. Another one is a deserted tropical beach. And another is...well it's just too personal to talk about.

Now we spend all of our time together, in our new spa.

It's wonderful... except he stopped going to work and lost his job.

If I can get him out of the spa, can you give him a job?

theatre review: the best little whorehouse in texas

By Lise Visser

Enthusiastic applause erupted early in this show by the Southampton Players, and bursts of applause occurred throughout in appreciation of the notable solos and production numbers. Some of the favorites in this troupe are back in a camaraderie of craft that works so well with Director/Choreographer Michael Disher at the foundation with Musical Direction by Dan Koontz.

The book by Larry L. King and Peter Masterson is based on a true business. There really was a Chicken Ranch in Texas, a brothel where favors could be traded for poultry. This is the story on which the play was based and a subsequent movie that starred Dolly Parton and Burt Reynolds.

The set designed by Mr. Disher and Ben Miller provides for action on two levels, with a spiral staircase at the left and the right. And oh, the action! Doorways fitted with shades create silhouetted activity - you know what kind of activity - behind closed doors. Ben Miller's lighting varies the mood with sultry passionate tones and enhances the settings.

Costumes by Mr. Disher and Jennifer Miller are lush lingerie for the pretty gals and sophisticated dresses for Miss Mona, the Madame, played by Suzanne Nicoletti in her welcome introduction to the company. The fellas are in football gear or jeans, always with cowboy boots to prance and stomp up a storm.

Ms. Nicoletti's knowing yet sweet demeanor portrays Miss Mona with a carefree competence. Her voice is reminiscent of Karen Carpenter seasoned with a pinch of the Spice Girls. As Miss Mona she carries herself proudly, even under investigation by a radio host and the scrutiny of the press that closes the brothel after over 140 years of satisfied customers.

There is one show stopper after another on this night of great performances. Doatsey Mae, played by Ericka Winne, sings a sweet solo that is contrasted by the sassy belt-it-out style of Jewel played by Anne Esguerra. The ensemble on stage, the Rio Grande Band, lends musical energy to the score by Carol Hall and keeps the pace going rapidly.

Melvin P. Thorpe (Vince Doty) is a radio personality that is so exaggerated that one is convulsed in giggles at his first appearance. His costume is authenticated down to the last hair on his head. His facial expressions are as large as the said in my song, I believe harmonies are colors and every time I paint it sharpens my harmonies. I definitely believe that. I love the water. I think its god's gift to us. It just brings me peace. I guess, I love regular things. I like to watch movies and chill at my house. I like to eat my mom's food. I like to spend time with my family. I like to go out to clubs sometimes, but unfortunately it's kind of weird, it almost feels like I'm in a cage sometimes when I go out because people look kinda strange at me. But some people are respectful. At some places they don't care, and I really have a great time listening to music and dancing and seeing what's going on."

Beyonce is a fashion diva so it's no surprise her favorite season is summer. She says, "I love the summertime because I like to go to the beach, and I like to jet ski. I hate wearing jackets and I hate being cold. I like the fashion, I like the little shorts and the little sandals, it's comfortable, you don't have to walk around in stilettos all the time."

Fashion and Hollywood aside, Beyonce has a deeper mission for her debut album. She told me, "I want to inspire people and I want to inspire them with my music, my messages and my songs, with everything that I'm about. I just hope that it's some inspiration for someone." She also says, "I might be coming out with another album because I recorded over forty songs and there are only thirteen on my record. I love so many of them I might put another record out in December with the rest of the songs." I asked her, "What would you call it?" Beyonce replied, "Dangerously Out Of Love? I don't know." (She laughs) "Don't put that in there, there'll be some more rumors." Sorry Beyonce, I couldn't resist. You and Jay Z do make a beautiful couple. Beyoncés solo Album "Dangerously In Love" hits stores June 24.

Until next week... Life is short! You only live once, party on!

(as they put it) information loss. This attempt was made in a combined effort by Dr. Susskind of Stanford working with Dr. Tom Banks, now of Rutgers University. The attempt failed.

"We wrote a paper," Dr. Banks said, "in which we said okay we're confused but this doesn't seem to work."

Another scientists, Gerard t'Hooft of the University of Utrecht in the Netherlands tried to develop a mechanism showing that mathematically anyway there had to be the Stuff information imprinted on Hawking's Radiation. But though Dr. t'Hooft is a very respected theoretical physicist, his work was not convincing.

At this point, I would like to quote you my very favorite paragraph from this article in the New York Times. It is page C10 on Tuesday, March 30, 1993. Keep in mind this was before the price of the Times went up to 75 cents outside the New York Metropolitan area. From the article:

"The catch was yet another fundamental law of physics, known as causality, or simply that nothing can travel faster than the speed of light. If light could not escape the gravitational pull of a black hole, for information to escape (to be imprinted on Hawking's Radiation), it would have to travel faster than light. But if information could travel faster than light, then it would, in principle, be possible to send the information backward in time, which would lead to the recognized paradoxes that come with time travel."

In spite of this, scientists have continued to plow ahead, determined to find that the Stuff has indeed been imprinted on Hawking's Radiation even though we can't detect it. A group of four physicists, two from Princeton, one each from the University of California at Santa Barbara and the University of Chicago did, this February, produce a one-dimensional computer model of a three-dimensional black hole. Using this model, they were able to show that if a black hole were to completely evaporate it would leave a "remnant" that could still contain all the Stuff.

But critics say the one-dimensional black hole is not an accurate model and, anyway, the "remnant" left is so large, bigger than one thousandth of a gram but "much smaller than, for example, this table," Dr. Banks said, trying to be funny, that the combined size of all the remnants is too large for the Stuff. We don't have that much Stuff.

This problem was tackled in the May 1993 issue of a magazine called the Journal of Physical Review D. In it, two professors and a student at Rutgers said that perhaps these "remnants" would in fact be tiny things, or appear to be tiny things to the outside world, but would have behind them infinitely long throats where you could store "lots and lots of information." They named these theoretical objects Cornucopions.

Well, the debate rages on. Does Stuff exist forever and ever, or is all this Stuff on the way out to nothingness. Dr. Strominger, the scientist that said you couldn't unsnarl a Black Hole with a 21st Century computer may have put it even better in a statement at the end of this article.

"It's a very fine line," he said, "between saying that the information is lost, and saying it's gone into a region of space-time where you'll never get it again."

Well, that's the Big Picture. I don't know about yours, but it certainly put my life in perspective. Now I desperately need a drink. -Dan Rattiner as you do the loop (Mike will pull 10 or 11 during an air show, we only did about 3) and the view in front of you goes from blue sky to the ground rushing up from behind your head. Scream rating: Yeeee Haaa.

The Hammerhead Turn: Straight up to a stop. Fall backwards a bit. Turn to the left. Now I'm getting a bit scared. Scream rating: YEEEEE HAAAAA.

The Tumble: MIND BLOWING. There's also a Polish word for this that the pilots use and it means "the hangover headache you get from drinking too much vodka." The tumble involves going straight up until you stop and then falling back just like the Hammerhead. No turn though. Instead you start to flip.

From the ground it looks like the pilot has lost all control and is going to die. From the plane it felt like Mike had lost all control and we were going to die.

Actually, because you're weightless, you don't feel too much. All you really see is: sky-ocean-horizon-ocean-land-sky-horizon-ocean-sky-ocean flashing before your eyes with no idea what is going on. No brain register. No idea what this sensation is. Not even in the ballpark of a rollercoaster. Maybe like being in a dryer on high? SCREAMING AT THE TOP OF YOUR LUNGS. And then Mike snaps the plane to attention and dives straight at the ground at 200+ miles per hour. One of the coolest sensations I've ever experienced. Scream rating: YEEEE HAAAAAA, WOOOOOO, YES YES YES, AWESOME.

After that my stomach could take no more. My brain was foggy, I didn't have a sense of what was up and what was down. And it was fantastic.

The other plane showed up and we snapped some pictures and I was trying to figure out what had just happened. The rest of the ten-minute ride was a blur. We landed. I stepped out and my knees were weak. We wandered over to the restaurant at the airport and had a quick bite. I think I had a cheeseburger. I couldn't stop smiling.

Flying will never be the same again. •

BREAKING NEWS

On Tues., June 10, ImClone Systems founder Sam Waksal was sentenced to seven years and three months in prison and fined more than $4 million for an insider-trading scandal that has attracted scores of media attention and now threatens to uproot Martha Stewart and her home decorating empire.

U.S. District Judge William H. Pauley ordered Waksal to report to federal prison on July 2. Until then, he must submit to electronic monitoring and remain in his Manhattan apartment, except for attending meetings with his lawyers.

Pauley rejected Waksal's pleas for a lighter sentence based on ImClone's cancer research and Waksal's humanitarian works. "The harm you wrought is truly incalculable," he said.

Waksal pleaded guilty in October to six counts, including securities fraud, bank fraud, conspiracy to obstruct justice and perjury. He admitted to a scheme in which he tipped his daughter Aliza to dump ImClone stock just before it plummeted in value on news that the Food and Drug Administration would not review his company's experimental drug, Erbitux.

Stewart, a close friend of Waksal's, was indicted last week on five federal counts, including obstruction of justice, conspiracy and lying to investigators. The charges are tied to her sale of nearly 4,000 shares of ImClone stock in December 2001. She pleaded innocent to all charges.

Peter Bacanovic, Stewart's former stockbroker, was also indicted and pleaded innocent. Prosecutors allege that Bacanovic illegally sent word to Stewart that Waksal's family was planning to unload shares of the stock.

A week ago, ImClone stock spiked after European researchers reported that Erbitux does appear to be effective, helping some colon cancer patients live longer.

"To cancer patients I am so sorry for any delay I might have effected in the approval of Erbitux because of my actions," Waksal said.

Shortle, Mark Strecker, Jackie Townsend, Matt Vilbas, Ericka Winne and others back in multiple roles in this production. Their commitment to the Southampton Players has fashioned a troupe with a built in mentorship that produces a superior experience for both the cast and the audience.

The precision and coordination of movements in the dance numbers is over the top. Talk about alumni incentives, the Aggies football team wins a night at the Chicken Ranch. Something about those boys in boots tattles the Texas answer to tap, complete with the SH Players' own Tommy Tune type side stepping it across the stage. (This show was Tommy Tune's first choreographed work on Broadway.) Those boys are hootin' and hollerin' as each girl appears on the balcony in her flouncy bouncy costume.

Go for the dancing, the singing, the costumes and the expectation of top level showmanship from another dazzling presentation by the Southampton Players.

HOME FOR THE SUMMER...By David Lion Rattiner

Sing

Singing has always been kind of a normal thing for me to do. When I was in grade school I used to sing in the chorus. From the very beginning I sang in the bass section. We would have little concerts in the gymnasium and all of us would walk onto these three section steps where you stood and sang the songs that you had been practicing for the past six or seven weeks. All the parents would show up along with brothers and sisters and video cameras. They would be dressed in their best suits. There would always be a solo by some extraordinarily talented kid in the chorus – usually it was a girl. A memory that really sticks out in my mind is when I was in grade school listening to one of my classmates sing that Les Miserable song “On My Own.” That is always a great song, it really gets under your skin. Chorus, for me anyway, lasted all the way through my senior year of high school. I even sang in a band for awhile.

Suddenly, I hit college, and the singing party was over. Nobody lets you really sing anymore. This doesn't seem fair to me. Singing is a great way to relieve stress; it's a proven fact. It seems silly that the second you leave public school and have more responsibility, they call you strange if you feel like singing for no other reason than just wanting to sing for the hell of it. This really bugged me, but I felt there was nothing that I could do. I became a closet singer. I started singing when nobody else was around and nobody could see or hear me. Even the shower was off limits. It was really rare for me to find a place by myself where I could sing.

Lately, however, I don't know what has come over me, but for some reason I have been feeling the urge to sing. I'm not really sure why I'm allowing myself to be heard by others. I think that it is just because I really want to sing more, so I have been. I got to tell you, it is so great.

In just the past week I have made a habit out of singing whenever and wherever. I get in the shower, I sing. I drive in the truck, I sing. I'm listening to music right now as I am writing this and guess what?

I'm singing!

It's really not an easy thing to do. Not the singing by itself, but the doing the singing and the something else. Okay it is true, the singing part is kind of hard as well. I hate it when I feel like my voice sounds just like the lead singer of a famous band's and then all of the sudden the lead singer does something that is just too hard to imitate. It is always something with those famous singers. Whether they can scream well, or sing really, really high or really, really low. Or I love it when the singer really just lets everything go and just nails the song with their voice and gets emotional with it. I think that is my favorite.

Just the other day I was in my truck and was singing along to Avril Lavigne in her song Sk8ter Boi. I felt that I was doing well at first. I was sounding just like her, in a guy sort of way at least. I started thinking about possibly starting up a band again and becoming a big time rock star. Maybe I could be a back up singer in her band. Everything was going great when all the sudden she started to sing the chorus in the song, an octave higher.

I simply just did not have the physical capability to sing as high as her. I started singing an octave lower than her to even things out. My brain felt like it was going to explode after trying to sing at the high octave.

Keep in mind, the whole time that I was singing to this song I was driving. People were looking at me like I was crazy. I couldn't figure it out. I was so into the song I didn't care. It was distracting while driving I guess. But it was just a little distracting. It was nothing compared to the distraction that a cell phone can sometimes cause.

I think the real problem with singing is trying to write this article about singing and sing at the same time. I keep trying to follow my train of thought and then I fall out of it because I'm trying to figure out what the heck a real estate novelist is. That's one of the lyrics of my all time favorites, “The Piano Man,” by Billy Joel. I love that music so much. If you know what a real estate novelist is, please let me know.

If you are somebody like me who is an out of the closet singer, whether it be that you sing in the car or in the shower, don't let anyone tell you that it is a bad thing. Never, ever stop singing.

Foxwoods: Entertainment, Gaming And Fine Dining

In the early years, Foxwoods grew so fast that if you stayed away for more than six months you might not recognize the phenomenally popular casino when you returned.

"We've changed a lot over the years to add more amenities for our guests and to keep the resort looking fresh and new," said Bill Sherlock, Foxwoods' president and CEO. "Add to that the best in gaming opportunities, a continuing lineup of world-class entertainers, along with some great restaurants and I'd say we are ready for a terrific summer."

The summer headliner entertainment in the Fox Theater compliments nightclub action in the Club BB King, which is actually two adjacent nightspots right on the casino concourse.

LL Cool J takes to the stage on June 18; followed on the 19th by Michael Buble, the jazz crooner known for making old standards his own. Kenny Rogers, a perennial favorite, headlines on the 20th and 21st while the singer-song writer Vivian Green from the hit show "American Dreams" will entertain at Foxwoods.

The July and August headliner schedule includes such names as Heart, Chris Isaak, Tom Jones, Ray Charles and Le Ann Womack, India.Arie, The Beach Boys and Huey Lewis. A full schedule is available at www.foxwoods.com.

While Foxwoods forges ahead with new amenities on site, just across the road, in the rolling Connecticut countryside, work is underway on a pair of championship golf courses.

Designed by the well-known golf course architect Rees Jones, the courses—one private and one for daily play—are laid out around the 90-acre Lake of Isles. When they're ready for play late next year, Foxwoods will have added another amenity for casino guests and those attending the increasing number of business conventions, conferences and trade shows that are taking place there.

Prior to this summer's expansion, the last major change at Foxwoods involved the Grand Pequot Hotel, which opened in stages starting in 1997 with a series of star-studded ribbon cuttings. Paul Anka did the honors at the initial opening. He even wrote some new lyrics for "My Way," the song he wrote for Frank Sinatra, and sang it at the opening ceremony.

A little over two years later, Foxwoods invited players into the Stargazer casino atop the Grand Pequot after international film star Jackie Chan cut the ribbon. That same weekend, another international star, Sophia Loren, cut the ribbon to open the Paragon restaurant on the hotel's 24th floor, one below the new casino.

The hotel is not only the newest, and as the name suggests, the grandest, but also the largest at Foxwoods with more than 800 rooms. It has three of the resort's gourmet restaurants, including the 24th floor Paragon that offers stunning views of the Connecticut countryside.

The up-scale Al Dente offers northern Italian cuisine in a relaxed atmosphere while the Fox Harbour, a short distance away, presents seafood dishes for the discriminating palate.

The hotel's 9th floor spa and salon offers a perfect opportunity to get away from the hustle and bustle. A full-service facility designed with a soothing old world feel, visitors have a total of 14 massage and treatment rooms waiting for them, one of the property's three pools and a workout room. There's also a relaxing salon to pamper you.

Despite the size, it is easy find what you want at Foxwoods. For instance, gaming at the Connecticut resort is spread out in six casinos, each with its own design, look and feel.

"When it comes to gaming, we've got it, whether you like large rooms with lots of action, or smaller, more private settings," said Sherlock. "There are no-smoking areas, rooms with lots of light and areas where the lighting is more subtle."

Opened in 1992, Foxwoods had 170 table games, three restaurants and a piano bar—but no slot machines. Since then, Foxwoods has grown to be the largest casino in the world, with more space devoted to gaming (320,000, sq. ft.), more slots than anyone, nearly 6,700, and more table games, 363, at last count.

Is it any wonder that Foxwoods is known as "the wonder of it all?"

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

EUROPHILES

Recently, Dan's Papers received an unsigned e-mail from a "car nut." The letter, published early in May, was critical of my opinions about certain cars, BMWs in particular. In my estimation, its author lacked an understanding of the automotive arena, and the intrinsic purpose of journalism. This e-mail referred to my poking fun at the current BMW styling. Don't get me wrong. I have the deepest respect for BMW motorworks. I owned one of the first 2002s when they were first imported to America; an amazing buy, $2,500 new out of the box including a sunroof. Just three months ago I sold my 3 series coupe, which gave me many miles of driving pleasure. Over the years both here and in Europe, I've driven some of the finest BMWs to ever come out of Bavaria, from an M1 to a Eurotuned 635. The best and most honest compliment

I can pay to BMW is the fact that I've owned many of their products, and they are all beautifully engineered.

Now that I've gotten that off my mind, let me mention that this guy was a real Europhile. He put down American and Japanese cars, while praising everything European. The English, French, Italians and Germans have historically preferred autos manufactured at home. At one time, when you crossed a border in Europe you knew in which country you were, not only by the architecture, but by the cars on the highway. The majority of cars in France were Peugeots and Citroens. Germany was full of Mercedes and Volkswagens, England, Austins and English Fords, and of course, Italy was Fiat and Lancia country. I called it automotive nationalism, and it still prevails in Europe today, the only difference is that Japanese products are becoming more and more prevalent on European roads.

Look in our own backyard for some excellent road cars produced outside Europe. The Chevrolet Corvette and Dodge Viper are two of the finest and fastest sports cars in the world. True, they don't have overhead cams and dry sump lubrication, but they get the job done at a bargain price compared to the Europeans. Why even the five-liter Mustang, which in many ways is a blast from the past, gives you more bang for the buck than any product built in Europe.

The American hits keep coming. The Lincoln LS and Cadillac CTS sedans are being refined as we speak, and in many ways compete with the best European offerings. I'm actually looking forward to seeing and driving the new Chevrolet Malibu, of all things. It's being built on GM's European German Opel chassis, and I'm hoping that it will handle as well as their Autobahn stormer. Will GM finally have a low priced sedan that handles?

Personally, I feel that Toyota and Honda have the best product lines in the world. Even the greatest Porsche motor car company has to admire the 2 liter engine in the Honda S2000 sports car. It's just a shame that this car's styling is not as exciting as its engine. Their Acura NSX model is as good a machine as any produced in Europe but its styling is dated. Why hasn't Honda raced this car ?

I disagree with the concept of four door automobiles as sports cars, but have to be totally awed by the performance of the two newly introduced Japanese buzz bombs, The Subaru Impreza WRX STI and the Mitsubishi Lancer Evolution. Their performance, especially their acceleration times, is stupendous. They are literally faster than cars that cost twice as much, and boy, do they handle. They are not built as well as the European hot rods, but can't be at their price. They are the shape of things to come. Get used to it Europhiles. There is a reason you see lots of cars with slanted headlights in every country in Europe. The Europeans may be nationalistic, but they know cars, and appreciate performance and value. They are buying Japanese, big time.

However, Mercedes and BMW still build the finest road (read, Autobahn) cars in the world. For pure high-speed security, nothing beats an S Klass Benz. For pure four seat fun, I'll take an "M" three series BMW coupe. Range Rover still rules the off-road crowd, and there will never be a car with the racing pedigree of the legendary Ferrari and Porsche Marques.

Just watch your back, fellas, those other guys are catching up with you. Fast and furious.

EAST END KIDS

CIRCUS IN TOWN

Hey wait, I know some of those kids! The circus didn't come to town, it originated in town. A group called the Van Lodostov (say that slowly and you'll see the clue) Family Circus Training Instructors did come to town and taught about 80 local kids how to perform circus acts, serious training for the big performance under the big top at LTV Studios in Wainscott on June 7. Think it was only the parents who attended? Think again – it was the hottest ticket in town – harder to get than a lunch with Renee Zellweger and her voice coach in East Hampton, harder to get than a fishing trip with Billy Joel. The recording at the CMEE advised the ticket hungry to stay home there was absolutely nothing. I think we saw some ticket scalpers hanging around the Candy Kitchen. The performance was real fun and watching how well these local children did with such limited training was awesome. The event was another winner for KIDS CREATE, for the Children's Museum of the East End. Remember they have their big fun raiser July 14 to help fund CMEE Museum Without Walls Programs.

Seeing the turnout proves the need for more kid-friendly events on the East End.

Have a party or event for kids – email us at david@nextpert.com and possibly we'll be there with camera, pad and crayons.

THE ISLANDS COME TO THE ISLAND

The Hayground School held a Caribbean Carnival, which was soaked in tradition inside while the Hamptons soaked in rain outside. This was our first visit to the progressive and innovative school and we were captivated by the cultural diversity of the students, the positive energy of the school teachers, officials, board members and parents. Coming here from New York, where pre-school and school admission is fodder for a sitcom, we wondered where the Haygrounds are in Manhattan.

Summer is only days away so we thought we'd relay some safety tips from the Consumer Federation of America:

AVOIDING SUMMER DANGERS FOR CHILDREN

CFA and SafeChild.net Release Top 10 Children's Summer Hazards The Consumer Federation of America (CFA), sponsor of www.SafeChild.net, one of the most popular, unbiased child safety Web sites, released a list of 10 top summer hazards for children. CFA and SafeChild.net are releasing this list because many of the injuries could be prevented if caregivers and parents follow a few basic safety tips.

TOP 10 SUMMER DANGERS TO KIDS

1. Poisoning. On average, poison centers handle one poison exposure every 14 seconds. Poisons may be solids (such as plants, batteries or berries), liquids (such as household cleaners, lamp oil or gasoline), sprays (such as oven cleaners, furniture polish or insect sprays) or gases (such as carbon monoxide). Post the National Poison Hotline by your phone: 1-800-222-1222.

2. Head Injury. Wear a helmet and protective gear when biking; skating; skateboarding; or riding scooters, horses or ATVs. www.safechild.net/for\_parents/pssportstips.html

3. Drowning. Children are drawn to water and need constant supervision when around places with even a small amount of water.

4. Vehicle. Buckle up! Never leave a child unattended in a car. At least 34 children died when left in hot cars in 2001. .

5. Playground Injuries. Falls cause 80 percent of all injuries, so a safe surface is critical. Limit the height of playground equipment and install and maintain a resilient surfacing in accordance with current safety guidelines.

6. Sun Damage. Sunscreen is not just for the beach! It is important for parents to apply sunscreen to their children regularly when they engage in any outdoor activities - even on overcast days.

7. Insect Bites. West Nile Virus, Lyme disease or allergic reactions are just a few of the complications that can occur from insect bites. Dress your child appropriately in long sleeves and pants and light colors and use insect repellent that contains DEET placed on their clothing.

8. Injuries While Home Alone. At some point, working parents find themselves considering the possibility of having kids take care of themselves. Statistics show that children alone are three times more likely than those under adult care to be involved in incidents where they are injured or harmed in some other way. Make sure your child knows what to do if he is injured, if something scares him or if there is an emergency situation.

9. Lightning and Thunderstorms. Every year about 100 people are killed by lightning. Children should be taught to seek safe shelter before a storm begins. If no shelter is available they should get to an open space and squat low to the ground as quickly as possible. Kneel or crouch with hands on knees. For more information, see: www.safechild.net/for\_parents/emergencyanddisaster.html#eighteen

10. Boating and Personal Water Craft Injuries. Life preservers or life jackets (also known as Personal Flotation Devices - PFDs) are required to be worn on boats by many states and must be present on all bodies of water supervised by the U.S. Coast Guard. Look for life jackets and life preservers approved by the U.S. Coast Guard. Children riding jet skis (also known as personal water craft) are at risk of head trauma, spinal injuries and trauma to the chest and abdomen.

Dan's North Fork

In A New Light

North Fork Painter Alan Bull Challenges His Past With A Vision Of His Future

'Chrysler,' Terry's Farm, Orient

By Susan Whitney Simm

Greenport artist Alan Bull is well known on the North Fork for his sensual images of barns, farm trucks, and pastoral vistas. Light and shadow play starring roles on these canvases, which have been very popular with local collectors. But with his new show at Blue Door gallery in Riverhead, Alan demonstrates that he's going in new directions. The artist himself is a work in transition.

"My previous work has led me to a new fascination with the facades of structures," said Alan at the opening of his show at Blue Door. "Most of my work features angles with strong light. To portray something head-on strikes me as more abstract, it emphasizes the overall shape of a structure as opposed to the three-dimensional quality of it. I want people to see what's so interesting about that. Sagaponack artist Chuck Close's portraits, with their direct head-on gaze, are a good example of this. There's something in-your-face about this approach."

Two excellent examples of this new focus in the show are "Crab Shack, Winter," and "No Vacancy." The first painting, a head-on view of the old Greenporter Hotel, is all about the shape of the building, particularly the old 50s-style sign, and the vivid juxtaposition of colors, which illustrates Alan's feeling about "how important it is to have one color next to another just as paint." The sign is now gone, a casualty of the new renovation. But the point here is not that it was necessarily a thing of beauty, but rather a landmark that, in its own way and for many years, defined a place.

"I have become fascinated with the visual identity of places," said Alan. "Once landmarks disappear, they take with them a certain identity and the whole place is somehow transformed. Fortunately, artists like Max Moran notice and think about that. I really relate to Max because I've seen images of his I've thought about painting that he's already painted. Like the little liquor store in Jamesport. I saw Max's painting of that store and I thought, Yes! That's exactly right."

In "Crab Shack, Winter," a snowy rear-view of the famous little building on Orient's causeway, the emphasis is clearly on shape as well as location. The artist portrays what has become an almost hackneyed image in a unique and compelling way by presenting us with a different angle and by focusing as much on the site as on the building itself.

'No Vacancy,' Greenport

"I often return to an image again and again. For example, I avoided painting the crab shack for a long time because it's like Motif #1 in Orient. But last winter after a heavy snow, I drove over the causeway and everything I was familiar with looked completely dif-

dio. During this period, Alan began to create his signature farm images and to develop a good customer base on the North Fork. Though he's pleased with the success of those images, Alan feels that they represent only a small part of what he hopes to accomplish.

Before returning to Greenport in 1999 after a year and a half back in the Boston area trying to develop clients, Alan got an invitation to have a show at the Union League Club in Manhattan. He decided to make the move back to Long Island. The Union League exhibit was followed by subsequent shows at the East End Arts Council in Riverhead and Whitney Art Works in Greenport. The response was "wonderful."

"It really made me feel that I made the right choice, coming back," said Alan. "People here aren't afraid to buy the work of local artists, whereas in Boston, it's almost as if you have to show elsewhere in order to gain credibility." Today, Alan shows regularly at Newburyport in the Boston area. "I guess I've lost the stigma of being a local artist up there." If the stigma has been lost to his advantage in Boston, it's clearly been gained to his advantage here on Long Island.

Not every decision Alan made early in his career as a painter was so easy. He describes a seminal moment that continues to have great impact today.

"After art school, I was really struggling with what I wanted to paint. Then I went to a retrospective in Philadelphia of artist Anselm Kiefer's work. It was beautiful and horrifying. It was about love, about death. It was his life. And he had made these monumental paintings that were so personal and put them out there in a way that communicated to me exactly what he was trying to express. I know now that if I make the picture in the most personal way possible to me, someone will understand. That show made me realize that my viewpoint is valid. I wasn't sure what my viewpoint was at the time, but I knew that if I went in search of it, what I found would be valid."

What Alan is finding today is a new way of capturing what an image means to him. In "Bait & Tackle," a painting of an old sign on the side of a building on Shelter Island, Alan de-emphasizes light and shadow in favor of a more abstract, graphic quality that again fferent to me. I decided to portray that building in a way that would not be immediately recognizable. I asked myself, is there really a new way to look at this image? The answer was yes."

Alan grew up in Maine, but his ancestry derives from one of the North Fork's founding families: the Terrys of Orient. As a child, Alan often visited his grandparents on the Orient family farm, where one of his earliest memories involves a painting by William Steeple Davis, a well-known local artist of the 30s and 40s.

After graduating from the Philadelphia School of Art and spending four years as a studio assistant for glass sculptor Dan Dailey outside of Boston, Alan realized that painting was his first love. He was awarded an art residency in Orient, created by Davis, to live and paint rent-free for a year in Davis' old stuemphasizes shape and juxtaposition of color.

"In this painting, I'm allowing myself to focus on imagery in a way that I haven't before," said Alan. "I believe this is the first of a series."

Alan's show at Blue Door is both a departure and an arrival. Rural scenes are strikingly absent, as those familiar with the artist's work will note. But there is a sense in the new work that Alan is maturing into a realm where he's less reluctant to take chances, and more inclined to express his vision in new terms. It's exciting to stand at the threshold of such change.

Artist Alan Bull

"I want to show people what I'm interested in now. That's why I'm enthusiastic about this show. I'm seeing something that I never saw before here on the North Fork. I could paint this area until I die and never tire of it. I'm painting some of the same places but in a completely different way than I was five years ago. I see the change, the growth in my work. And it's very exciting."

Indeed it is.

Celebrating The "Best Of The Best" Of Our Local Dining Destinations

What's Cookin'

'Tis the time of year when we anxiously start scouting out our favorite farmstands for signs of summer. Horseradish, asparagus, and rhubarb herald the season as arugula, lettuces and over-wintering spinach follow on their heels.

While this process never fails to excite even dormant culinary instincts, perhaps those who get the most inspired are our local chefs. After a long winter hoping for freshness to arrive from around the globe, these masters of the range look ravenously forward to slicing and dicing the best the East End has to offer. And while the lushness of our mid-summer is indeed incomparable, it's always the sweet beginning that stirs us most. —Susan W. Simm, Dan's North Fork Editor

Bay & Main. Steps from the streets of Greenport down a gas lit alleyway and you're in . . . New Orleans? Key West? Napa? Somewhere different, that's immediately apparent upon entering through the very interesting front doors. Cathleen MacCarthy's restaurant exudes sensuality, and the lengthy martini list quickly punctuates the point. The menu offers many pleasures, starting with lightly battered calamari and a deceptively delicious salad of greens in balsamic vinaigrette. Monkfish medallions with olives, roasted peppers and sundried tomatoes is a dish to treasure for lovers of Mediterranean cooking. Chef Jason Gould's accompaniments — particularly those involving potatoes — are sublime. Entrees, $18-$26. 300 Main Street, Greenport, 477-1442. (Bradbrook, 12/6/02). [L].

Cooperage Inn. With a beautiful new look emphasizing the cooperage theme, this charmer continues to carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Chef/owner Jonathan Perkins, along with chefs Laimo and Hegeman, produce inspired appetizers such as rare sesame tuna carpaccio and pan-seared fresh mozzarella, and don't miss the sesame crusted calamari served over field greens with a soy vinaigrette. Steaks are steakhouse worthy, and the rigatoni ala vodka continues to dazzle. Fish here is always pristine and cooked with a light hand. Coming this summer: outdoor Tiki bar. Entrees $15.50-$30. 2218 Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. 727-8994. (Simm,

1/10/03). [B]

Do Little's. Very welcoming and unpretentious. An excellent menu for diners interested in fresh, smartly prepared dishes that are not calorically trumped up. Thai mussels in ginger/lemon grass broth hit the mark. Excellent pasta dishes, headlined by justifiably famous Seafood Pasta in white wine sauce, filled with mussels, clams and shrimp over linguine with fresh tomatoes and spinach. Stuffed ravioli with sun-dried tomatoes and mozzarella is beautifully done. Sensibly priced wine list, with a knowing nod to local vintages. Entrees, $12.95-$19.95. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza, Mattituck. 298-4000. (Bradbrook, 7/28/01) [G].

Fauna. A hip and elegant culinary gem. Co-owner and consulting chef Mark Mittelman's menu astutely incorporates Asian influences into superbly conceived New American dishes. Tuna sashimi shines as an appetizer, as does duck confit atop sautéed spinach with walnuts and dried cranberries. Try and find room for the butternut squash pot stickers. The all-star cast of entrees includes Southeast Asian steak salad, pan-roasted bourbon chicken and a Napoleon of roasted vegetables. Desserts rotate daily. Extensive wine list with sixteen local vineyards. Entrees $20-$26. Route 25, Aquebogue. 722-5813. (Trueman-Honey, 6/7/02). [A,F]

La Cuvee Wine Bar & Bistro at the Greenporter Hotel. Gourmet bistro dining adjoining a hip boutique hotel footsteps from Greenport's vibrant downtown. The casually upscale dining room creates a pleasing environment for a light and adventurous menu. Seafood appetizers like tuna tartar and the sublime mussels in coconut and lemongrass broth bear an unmistakable Asian influence. But executive chef / owner Deborah Rivera's culinary artistry really announces itself when the entrees arrive. Long Island duck in an orange-infused coconut sauce is impressive enough, but topped by her otherworldly Chilean Sea Bass poached in a miso-sesame broth. Exceptional wine list, with by-the-glass offering many pleasant surprises. Entrees, $21-$26. 326 Front Street, Greenport. 477-0066. (Bradbrook, 4/25/03).

La Plage. Exciting and imaginative haute cuisine just steps away from a Long Island Sound beach. Chef/owner Wayne Waddington's menu undergoes constant revision, reflecting his selection of premium ingredients or his latest inspiration for a sauce. His creations fly off the menu almost as quickly as off the plate, but if you have the chance, put in for the Yukon Gold potato soup with an oyster beignet, the roulade of local crab with succulent micro greens or the Griggstown Farm quail in smoked bacon. Superb wine list. Exceptional desserts. Entrees $22-33. 131 Creek Road, Wading River. 744-9200. (Bradbrook, 11/1/02). [R,V]

Modern Snack Bar. Home-cooked meals away from home await you at this charming family-run restaurant operating since 1950. Wittmeier brothers' time-honored menu contains dishes too good to go out of style. Delectable sauerbraten is perfectly tender and the stuffed cabbage very good. Duck breast salad, recently introduced, is another winner. Crab cakes and lobster salad are real treats, but the big surprise is the world-class shrimp and crabmeat quiche. Home-baked desserts are splendid and their take-out pie business is brisk. Wines are mostly limited to local vintages. Reservations not needed, but day or night, it's always a crowded house. Entrees, $9-$17. Rt. 25 Aquebogue. 722-3655. (Bradbrook, 10/4/02). [T]

Pepi's. Dazzling panoramic views of Peconic Bay and sumptuous Northern Italian cooking combine for a sensuous dining experience. Appetizers include a highly flavorful vegetable antipasto and a fresh tri-color salad of arugula, radicchio, and endive. Penne ala vodka, often predictable, is anything but here. The penne is served perfectly al dente and the sauce is both smooth and smokey. Also delicious is chicken Sorrentino, with eggplant, prosciutto and fresh mozzarella. Come dessert, do not miss the tiramisu, co-owner Nick Nikolov's specialty, an all-time keeper. Entrees $16-19. Port of Egypt Marine, Southold. 765-6373. (Bradbrook, 6/8/01). [K,O,Q] tently tasty dishes excite the palate. Typically adventurous and successful is the pan-seared monkfish with a yellow tomato sauce and black olive purée topped by crispy fried leeks. Mazzella's treatment of fish epitomizes Greek and Italian-style preparation at its best. The appetizer of heirloom tomatoes with bocconcini mozzarella and fresh basil and balsamic vinegar is a tomato dish for the ages. Innovative desserts, too. Entrees - $16-$28. 13560 Main Rd., Mattituck. 298-4800. (Bradbrook, 6/14/02). [E,N]

Ross' Rotisserie and Smokehouse. A casual, homey eat-in or take-out spot opened by John Ross, former chef/owner of Ross' North Fork Restaurant. Great rotisserie and crispy fried chicken; marinated, honey-glazed duck legs; hickory-smoked spareribs; homemade soups and chowders; many cooked-from-scratch side dishes. Every Friday fish fry is an excellent value. A special 6-pound LI duck, cooked crisp, boned and quartered, accompanied by duck sauce and a garnish of apricots and cranberries ($19.99) is available by reservation the day before. Open 7 days 12-8. Route 48, Southold, 765-9655. (Simm, 10/5/01). [U]

The Seafood Barge. The North Fork restaurant for fish lovers. Owner/manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsey Flinn are as fanatical about results as Steinbrenner/Torre. Newly imported executive chef Michael Meehan updates the menu's standards and introduces several of his own specialties. Vichyssoise spiked with crab meat and basil oil was a rousing success. Marinated baby octopus with baby spinach was succulent and tender. As for the fish, the sushi appetizer continues to be stellar. The pan-seared striped bass with a red pepper broth is a revelation. Desserts are sensational. Excellent wine list, particularly local vintages. Entrees $24-$32. Port of Egypt Marina, Rt. 25, Southold. 765-3010. (Bradbrook, 7/26/02). [M,S]

Sultan's Kitchen. At last, a good, authentic Eastern Mediterranean for the region. The emphasis is on Turkish cooking, one of the world's healthiest cuisines. The spacious dining room is non-descript, as this is a former pancake emporium; the subtleties are all in the flavoring of the food. Soups such as red lentil and tripe are spiced just right. The varied appetizers favor vegetarians while the main courses concentrate on lamb and chicken, often with delectable results. Turkish baklava and kadayif are exceptional finishing touches. Entrees $6.50-$15.95. 1077 Old Country Road, Riverhead. 369-9766. (Bradbrook, 8/9/02.)

Tuscan House. Your table is yours for the evening at this elegant, upscale Italian. Authentic, classical dishes bear the deft touch of chef William Oster. His fish is exceptionally fresh and his osso buco masterly. But his virtuosity lies in the care with which he pairs his 16 pastas and his sublime sauces. The results range from delicate to intense. Pappardelle with a puree of beans dressed with soppressata, fresh chilies, garlic and parmesano regiano is typically adventurous and winning. The dessert tray is filled with excellent choices. Well-chosen wines, emphasis on regional Italians. 673 Osborn Ave., Riverhead. 727-2330. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01). [I]

Tweed's. One of the Island's most atmospheric dining rooms couples with an imaginative menu in the historic John L. Sullivan Hotel. Owner Ed Tuccio raises buffalo in Riverhead and his restaurant serves outsize portions of bison meat cooked to perfection in a merlot reduction so exquisite, it demands to be bottled. The quite versatile menu also features Chef Jeff Trujillo's first-rate crab cakes. Seared scallops in champagne sauce with grapes and onion marmalade brought terrifically creative accompaniments to the often pairing-resistant bivalves. Ambitious desserts boast great variety, with Strawberries Romanoff particularly winning. Entrees $19-26. 17 E. Main St., Riverhead. 208-3151. (Bradbrook, 8/30/02). [C, P].

Big Event Of The Week

Agnes Of God At The Vail-Leavitt

A chain-smoking lapsed-Catholic psychiatrist is sent to a convent to determine whether a novice – who may or may not have killed her newborn baby – is mentally fit for trial. But who is the father? Was it a virgin birth? A miracle? And what of the blood that spontaneously appears on her hands? The psychiatrist clashes with the Mother Superior over the line between faith and science and finds that there are no easy answers.

Directed by Serena Seacat of East Hampton, Agnes of God, the hit play by John Pielmeier, will be presented by The Vail-Leavitt Theatre Company! June 13 through 22 at the Vail-Leavitt Music Hall on Peconic Avenue in Riverhead.

Tickets are $18 for general audience, $15 for seniors, vets, and students. Tickets can be purchased at Blue Door Gallery (745-6870) or by calling the VLTC! Tickethline at 631-369-4661.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

For my sweet toothed husband Fred, I was certain a ricotta cheesecake that appeared in the New York Times magazine section would appeal to him. I pared down the amount of ricotta in the cake and included the mascarpone, listed as optional. I have made the cake with both fresh ricotta which was strongly recommended and commercial ricotta they were equally delicious. I decided to use the more available commercial ricotta here. Best of all the cake should be made at least one day before serving.

I've probably made fewer cookies than cakes but was intrigued with Dorie Greenspan's Korova cookies from her new dessert book Paris Sweets, Broadway Books. The recipe was inspired by Pierre Herme; the man Vogue Magazine called "The Picasso of Pastry." What I love about this book is her attention to detail and the explicit instructions that Dorie has carefully sealed on every page.

Sweet tooth or not, dad is sure to have a sweet Father's day with either of these pleasure-giving desserts.

DORIE GREENSPAN'S KOROVA COOKIES

Makes about 36 cookies

1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/3 cup Dutch-process cocoa powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1 stick plus 3 tablespoons unsalted butter, at room temperature
2/3 cup packed light brown sugar
1/4 cup granulated sugar
1/2 teaspoon fleur de sel or 1/4 cup fine sea salt
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
5 ounces bittersweet chocolate, chopped into bits

1. Sift the flour, cocoa and baking soda together and keep close at hand. Put the butter in the bowl of a mixer fitted with the paddle attachment and beat on medium speed until the butter is soft and creamy. (Alternately, you can do this and all subsequent steps by hand, working with a sturdy rubber spatula. Add both sugars, the salt and vanilla extract and beat for another minute or two. Reduce the mixer speed to low and add the sifted dry ingredients. Mix only until the dry ingredients are incorporated – the dough will look crumbly, and that's just right. For the best texture, you want to work the dough as little as possible once the flour is added. Toss in the chocolate pieces and mix only to incorporate.

EAST HAMPTON POINT

Fine Dining
329-2800

2. Turn the dough out onto a smooth work surface and squeeze it so that it sticks together in large clumps. Gather the dough into a ball, divide it in half and working with one half at a time, shape the dough into logs that are 1 1/2 inches in diameter. (Cookie-dough logs have a way of ending up with hollow centers, so as you're shaping each log, flatten it once or twice and roll it up from one long side to the other, just to make certain you haven't got an air channel.) Wrap the logs in plastic wrap and chill them for at least 1 hour. (Wrapped airtight, the logs can be refrigerated for up to 3 days or frozen for 1 month.)

3. Center a rack in the oven and preheat the oven to 325 degrees. Line two baking sheets with parchment paper and keep them close at hand.

4. Working with a sharp thin-bladed knife, slice the logs into rounds that are 1/2 inch thick. (Don't be upset if the rounds break; just squeeze the broken-off bit back onto the cookie.) Place the cookies on the parchment-lined sheets, leaving about 1 inch spread space between them.

5. Bake only one sheet of cookies at a time and bake each sheet for 12 minutes. The cookies will not look done, nor will they be firm, but that's just the way they should be. Transfer the baking sheet to a cooling rack and let the cookies stand until they are only just warm or until they reach room temperature.

RICOTTA MASCARPONE CHEESECAKE

Prepare this luscious Italian-style cheesecake the day before serving.
Makes 10-12 servings

1/3 cup zwieback or tea biscuit crumbs
1 tablespoon unsalted butter, softened
1 teaspoon plus 1 1/3 cup granulated sugar
2 1/2 pounds fresh ricotta, drained of liquid
6 large eggs
1 cup mascarpone
2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract
2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice

1. Break 5 zwieback or biscuits in a food processor with steel knife and process until a fine crumb. Butter the bottom and sides of a 9 x 3-inch springform pan and coat the pan with 3 tablespoons crumbs mixed and 1 teaspoon sugar. (Reserve remaining crumbs to coat top of cake when ready to serve.) Wrap a length of heavy-duty foil large enough to encircle the baking pan to make it waterproof.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees

2. Place ricotta in the bowl of an electric mixer with flat blade and beat at low speed until smooth. Loosen the cheese as necessary if it clumps in the blade. Add eggs, one at a time, and beat until smooth. Add remaining sugar and continue beating until mixture is very smooth. Beat in the mascarpone, the vanilla and lemon juice. Pour into the prepared pan and smooth the top.

3. Place the pan in a Bain-Marie (inside a baking pan no higher than the cake pan) and add hot water to the larger pan to within an inch or so of the top of the larger pan. Place in oven and bake for one hour and 40-50 minutes. After 30 minutes of initial baking time place a tent of foil loosely over the top to prevent browning. Test for doneness with a cake tester or thin knife until it comes out clean. The top of the cake should never be less shimmer a bit. Remove from oven and let cool in the water bath. Lift pan from water bath and remove the foil.

4. To unmold, slide a thin knife around the cake edges. Release the sides of the springform pan and transfer to a cake plate. Cover loosely with plastic wrap and refrigerate overnight.

Dining In The Hamptons

Side Dish By Aji Jones

The Long Island Farm Bureau, the Long Island Wine Council and the New York State Restaurant Association's Long Island chapter have come together to present Savor Long Island, a month long celebration of food and wine taking place in July. Presented by Long Island's chefs using Long Island's agricultural produce and sponsored by the East End Institute, the event is designed to raise awareness of the tremendous products of Long Island's farmers, vintners and fisherman. For further information or for a complete list of participating restaurants and wineries call 727-3777 or log on to www.libf.com.

Seems restaurants get all the play these days. But just for the record, here's a look at what Cheryl Stair and John Kowalenko of Art of Eating (267-2411) have scheduled this summer. All this month, Cheryl has been the coordinating chef for BBQ and Beyond the fab cookout on June 21 recreating dishes from some of Manhattan's top chefs so that the food will be ready when they come out. That same day, AOE will cater an event for the South Fork Natural History Society. They'll cater six weeks of Polo for Manhattan Mortgage, as well as cater a benefit for The Retreat on August 9th. Art of Eating also will serve as the catering coordinator for the VIP tent at Southampton College's "All for the Sea" concert featuring Jimmy Buffet on July 13 and will exclusively cater the reserved seating. And oh yes, their food will be served at the chalet at The Hampton Classic - they don't horse around!

Rubi Red (907-8030) adds a new twist to their Sunday brunch with live music from a Caribbean band from 12 p.m. until 3 p.m. Sample menu items include: London broil with two eggs any style, home fries and toast ($10); French toast with local berries, syrup and butter ($7.55); and fish cakes with basil aioli and coleslaw ($13).

Babette's (329-5377) has announced a few new additions to her dinner menu. Ecuadorian sopa de pollo is a traditional Latin chicken soup with potatoes and fusilli in a rich roasted chicken stock with a hint of milk. The soup features hints of roasted cumin and fresh fusilli. Also try the new pan roasted center cut halibut with grilled broccoli rabe, cheddar potatoes and medallions of pomodoro, or the grilled Atlantic salmon with truffled lentil pilaf and chive whipped Yukon gold potatoes. And look for Kim Cattrall while you are there!

Here's the thing about The Pizza Place in Bridgehampton (537-7865): you've got owner Jed Feldman - former Manhattan bartender extraordinaire - serving up excellent pies, entrees and hospitality. Tell him the Bartender's Defense League sent you.

Have a heart for God's sake and go spend money at Plain and Fancy (267-3199 or 725-0976). Yes, the very same Plain and Fancy that burned down about three weeks ago on Springs Fireplace Rd. in East Hampton. They have a small outlet in Amagansett and now have temporarily set up shop over by Long Beach in Sag Harbor at the Waterside/Salty Dog locale.

If you're looking for a romantic spot have dinner, Mirko's voted "#1 in the Hamptons" by Zagat 2003 is the place to dine. Serving dinner Wednesday through Sunday, prix fixe Wednesday, Thurs and Sunday. Located in Water Mill Square on Montauk Highway they are celebrating their 20th season. Call 631-726-4444 for reservations and information.

The Disher Hears That... Dennis McNeil is serving up good vittles at Michael's (324-0725) at Maidstone in Springs... Bobby Van's (537-0590) has a $21 Lobster Nite on Thursdays... The Beacon (725-4444) has a fab prix fixe Monday thru Thursday (ask for Chef Christian Mir)... Saracen in Wainscott (537-6255) offers complimentary antipasti in the lounge every night until 6:45!... Giordano's in Sag Harbor (725-4444) offers a $15.95 pasta special Wednesday - Friday... that Mirko's nabbed a 27 (out of 30) food rating in the special Hamptons Zagat Survey 2003-04 followed closely by Dave's Grill, Stone Creek, Harvest, 1770, Plaza Café and Robert's (all with 25)... Oakland's in Hampton Bays (728-6900) has a lobster bash Monday and Tuesday evenings... Quinn's in Montauk (668-6818) has a Monday PM spaghetti and meatballs deal for $8.95!

Coping With Tragedy in the Garden

Farmers, gardeners, and others in close contact with the cycles of nature learn to appreciate the fact that life goes on. The past few weeks of meteorological anomalies have reinforced that lesson while bringing many tragedies to the East End's agricultural circles.

Late season frosts took the lives of young tomatoes and marigolds. Torrential rains consumed newly planted seeds which will never see the light of day. Cold, waterlogged soils forced many potato farmers to wait until the end of May before planting their fields, among the latest starts in living memory. June rain sat on these newly planted fields and whole acres of seed potatoes simply rotted.

In my own garden, the fava beans look anemic, their wet, frigid roots unable to draw up sufficient nutrients. The leaves of a Brown Turkey fig tree, said to survive as far north as Chicago, are jaundiced and decayed. Anxious shoppers have been mopping around gardening stores, where owners have considered stocking antidepressants next to the pelletized lime.

"This is one of the wettest winters and springs I have ever recorded," said Richard Hendrickson, who has been collecting rain and watching the mercury at his family farm in Bridgehampton since 1930. His home is an official US weather service observation station.

The chaos began during the past winter, when 55 inches of snow fell on the Hamptons, more than twice the average. The snowmelt had already saturated the soil by the beginning of spring.

Then the region absorbed twice the normal rainfall in both April and May, and more rain fell in the first nine days of June (4 inches) as is typical for the entire month (3 inches). Temperatures have hovered at 10 to 12 degrees below normal since April, making it hard for the land to dry out and turning the Hamptons into the Damptons.

Hendrickson assured me that the cold snap would break and he predicted bright sunshine, warm days, delightful cool breezes from the ocean on every hot day, and "at least one hurricane." He added that "unless it dries off, we'll see lots of fungus, mildew, and molds."

Some gardeners take a more rosy view of the seasonal confusion. "There's great beauty in this slow spring we're having," said Carol Williams, who gardens in Sag Harbor and is the author of Bringing a Garden to Life. "Last year, the dry spring accelerated and protracted everything, but we can now see every bud and each stage of plant life unfolding."

Williams points to shrubs, trees and perennials on her land that were on the edge, stressed by successive droughts. "They are coming back to life," Williams says. A Cox's orange pippen that produced meager fruit over the last few years reveals the start of an ample apple harvest.

The seasoned farmer and patient gardener knows that life, like hope, springs eternal. Bok choy, lettuce, and other greens are thriving; asparagus lovers are rejoicing. A few of my more mature favas are greening up. The fig is putting out its first new buds. And a young kiwi vine that was gnawed to the ground by a rabbit has sent up several new shoots in defiance. Things have a way of coming back.

Jacob Rottkamp of Fox Hollow Farm in Baiting Hollow on the North Shore watched as a March blizzard piled snow on 25 acres of sweet corn that he starts under plastic to assure an ample crop by the 4th of July.

"We don't fool Mother Nature," Rottkamp explained. "We're gamblers." The snow melted and the young seedlings had survived. Rottkamp said he'll have corn in July, but not by the 4th.

We may not be enjoying the milky flesh of sweet corn on Independence Day, but the East End should still grow ample corn this season. The connoisseurs who understand that sweet corn trucked in from Florida or Arizona or farther afield will never rival the sensuous delight of local corn harvested at the peak of ripeness will just have to be a bit patient this year.

Dining In The Hamptons

Walking up the path to the restaurant across the street from The Inn at Quogue, one may easily become intimidated by its "Old World Charm" or its stately appearance. The huge white building's perfectly manicured landscaping resembles the mansions owned by some of the oldest and wealthiest families in the Hamptons. Its new owner, Larry Hoffman has recently renovated The Restaurant at the Inn, and what a fabulous job he has done. It has the romantic ambiance for a first date as well as the capacity for a large family function all at very reasonable prices.

Upon entering the restaurant, I was greeted by a handsome gentleman who escorted me to the masculine parlor/sunroom. There, large brown leather and wicker chairs boasting a toasty fireplace and a huge glorious mahogany bar. The cabernet/shiraz blend I was served really hit the spot. My companion and I were seated immediately. Our waitress explained to us that on Thursdays and Sundays the restaurant has a three-course prix fixe menu for only $24.00 and luckily for us it was Thursday.

I am a big fan of their $9.95 Country Inn Sunday Brunch that includes a buffet of pastries, muffins, bagels and assorted cream cheeses, fresh seasonal fruit, unlimited juice, coffee and tea, plus unlimited "build your own" bloody Mary and mimosa bar. Not only is it one of the best deals in the Hamptons, but you are also serenaded by talented musicians while you eat. The keyboard player, "The one and only" Bill Smith, and guitarist and lead vocalist, Walter Finley (2002 recipient of the Dan's Papers "Best of the Best" award for favorite male vocalist) were my saviors during this cold and dreary winter.

An exciting new world cuisine" menu presented by the executive chef, Matthew Guiffreda, includes a mix of Asian, South American, Italian, Caribbean and Mediterranean cuisine. Mr. Guiffreda, one of the new "star" chefs in the Hamptons, has studied at the Pennsylvania

Culinary Institute in Pittsburgh and then worked as a chef at the Turtle Bay Restaurant in the Caneel Bay Resort in St. Johns. Later he spent four years at the Pine Hurst Resort in North Carolina as well as other spots in West Virginia and Florida.

We immediately began with the soup du jour, which was a delicious and perfectly seasoned roasted Roma tomato and dill bisque. To my surprise, we were served two of the largest and beautiful salads that I had ever encountered at a prix fixe dinner. The "not so traditional" spicy Caesar includes Romaine lettuce, herbed grape tomatoes tossed in a mulato Chile Caesar dressing with a hint of chocolate accompanied by spiced croutons. It is served in a huge flour tortilla basket topped with fresh parmesan cheese. The sour apple and gorgonzola salad is another excellent choice. Baby greens are tossed with crunchy apples and toasted walnuts, dressed with a hickory smoked bacon vinaigrette, and topped with crumbled gorgonzola cheese. Some other great appetizers on the menu are the simply green salad, which is tossed in a lime balsamic sour, towered with sprouts of baby radishes, and topped with crumbled boursin cheese in a herbed tomato bowl. For a few more dollars you can also get a fried oyster lasagna, a surf-and-turf seviche, chill'in jerked jumbo lump crab cakes, the sashimi tuna and avocado tartar or the Mojito rum BBQ grilled jumbo shrimp.

For an entrée I ordered the jerked bay scallops and lobster risotto, which is served on a bed of lemon paper and charred vegetable orzo "risotto" with a bouquet of razor clams in a puddle of roast vegetable coulis, rounded by balsamic gastrique. It is incredibly flavorful, and I was delighted with my choice. We were also served the "put the lime in the coconut" Chilean sea bass, which was a generous portion of fish served on a knoll of apple wood smoked bacon and roast corn parmesan grits heaped with watercress slaw, in a pool of coconut lime basil emulsion, (mixture of two or more unmixable liquids, using oil and the incorporation of air). For an additional price we tried the Ancho Chile and citrus grilled twin lobster tails which is served on a mound of crispy prosciutto and roasted red pepper mofongo, (fried plantains) with jicama green papaya slaw drizzled with a lime chipotle BBQ beurre blanc. Also included on the prix fixe menu is either a Moroccan grilled shell steak or a housing glazed pan seared escolar that both sound great. I can only tell you how happy we were with our entrees.

For dessert Noel presented us with a chocolate fallen soufflé with crunchy cappuccino iced cream and a massive piece of strawberry shortcake, soaked in Malibu rum and served in a puffed coconut shortcake and covered in fresh whipped cream. This is probably the best prix fixe dinner I had ever had the pleasure of sampling.

The Restaurant at the Inn at Quogue is serving their prix fixe dinners on Thursday and Sunday evenings at 5:30 with regular dinners being offered on Friday, Saturday, and Monday nights, and a Sunday brunch from 10:00 to 3:00 PM.

The Restaurant at the Inn at Quogue is located at 47 Quogue Street. Call 653-6800.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"PLASTIC SURGERY" AT SARA NIGHTINGALE GALLERY

In keeping with its reputation of presenting "edgy" art, Water Mill's Sara Nightingale Gallery currently features a husband and wife team from Miami whose aesthetic background is somewhat new to East Enders. Florida is one of the few states offering government support for artists: Miami's Lincoln Street is one such venue where public studio space predominates the famous South Beach area.

This critic had an opportunity to see the studios a few years ago, and although we made no great artistic discoveries, the community spirit and vitality were wonderful to experience. (New York would be well-served if there were similar venues available.)

Like our previous experience in Miami, this exhibition does not unearth any aesthetic "finds." Such an observation does not infer, however, that a trip to the gallery is not warranted. Mr. Delponte's and Ms. Wharton's art is still developing, and we'd like to see their work again in five years.

Ms. Wharton's "Milk," executed with a potato masher, recalls Carroll Dunham's forms, while Mr. Delponte's pieces, with images drawn on blocks, remind us of Rima Smyth's presentational mode, the latter individual also showing previously at the Nightingale Gallery.

Even so, Ms. Wharton's goal to redefine the purposes of women's banal kitchen tools will probably go unnoticed by most viewers. The reason? We don't realize that the works were done with potato mashers. It's a shame because the idea is a good one.

Mr. Delponte's mixed media works are not as subtle although it still takes a good bit of looking to get the point. The artist says he is interested in the "traumas and delights of the human condition... to examine contemporary culture..."

In such works as "Freeze" and "Plastic Surgery" we see motifs appear: high heels, faces, toes. Perhaps the fragmentation and randomness of these images are the point of society's disconnection. Again, we may be "reading" too much into the pieces while trying to make a "thematic" connection ourselves.

The presentation as a series of blocks in a row is not unusual but may be the most effective part. This grid approach is an art form in itself, as great artists like Agnes Martin know very well.

The show will be on view until July.

HONORING THE ARTIST: ERNESTO CHORAO

Artist Ernesto Chorao is a man who finds freedom in being anonymous as he also gets energy from people. While this observation seems like a contradiction, it's not. As this week's cover artist says, "I love living in New York where I can walk down the street and no one will notice me.. I love watching the people, especially children as I walk. This energizes me."

The contradiction is resolved when we realize that Mr. Chorao is someone who is an observer of both people and objects, that feeling anonymous allows him to be like that well-known fly on the wall.

The cover, of course, has to do with boats, not people, but it still reflects the artist's attraction to the environment. The scene is from Jamesport where Mr. Chorao has had a summer home for twenty-seven years. "I go to Jamesport for three days at a time," he notes. "My wife Ann stays the whole summer. It's a place where she can work on her children's books."

Mr. Chorao's spouse Ann is a prolific illustrator, having written over eighty books. (She goes under the professional name of Kay Chorao.) "We met in London at the Chelsea Art School," her husband explains. "I had moved from South Africa to London at that point."

We remark at the fact that the couple are both interested in children and art. We wonder how they work together. Mr. Chorao saying simply, "We are quite honest with each other."

Mr. Chorao's interest in children / art has other roots. He was an art teacher in New York's public school system for twelve years (after receiving his B.A. in Art History from Columbia University and a teaching degree from Teachers' College).

Mr. Chorao also taught at Riverside Church. Of that time, he remarks, "The adults were so eager to learn. I really enjoyed it."

Regarding the couple's own children, Mr. Chorao is most enthusiastic when talking about them: "My middle son is an artist; he went to the High School of Music and Art. My youngest son just published his first novel, and my oldest lives in Jamesport."

For now, the artist's own work features a series about children in watercolors and waterlillies in oil. Plans for the future? He says, "There's not anything I'd rather do than paint."

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAMPTONS

Take Five 2003 with Jan Silver

This Father's Day week is filled with first-class entertainment on the East End. Bay Street Theatre opens its second summer production, Opera of the Hamptons begins its summer season, and Pianofest starts its Monday concerts. This is the Parrish Art Museum's big "Landscape Pleasures" weekend, and the restored Victorian Vail-Leavitt Music Hall opens in Riverhead with the drama Agnes of God. There are well-reviewed theater productions onstage in Southampton, Westhampton Beach and Bellport, plus good musicians and interesting speakers (actress Diane Keaton in East Hampton on Sun.) at other local venues. Two films, the acclaimed bio-pic Frida and a new documentary about sculptor Elizabeth Strong-Cuevas, will be screened here this weekend.

One of our leading environmental-protection organizations, Group for the South Fork, holds its big dinner-dance and auction at Sagaponack's Wolffer Estate vineyard on Saturday evening. For details on my choices for this week's events, read on:

THEATER

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre opens two one-acters, Harold Pinter's The Lover and Arthur Schnitzler's Bacchanalia, this weekend. The plays are comedic and voyeuristic journeys into life and love by two well-known playwrights (one deceased and one very much alive). The cast features Broadway actors John Glover, Sally Murphy, Ted Schneider, John Beuscher – all shepherded by Broadway actor/director Daniel Gerrroll. Showtimes are Tuesday through Sunday evenings plus Wed. and Sat. matinees. For tickets ($38-$60), call the box office at 631-725-9500 or go online to www.baystreet.org.

The new Vail-Leavitt Theatre Company begins its summer season at Riverhead's restored Victorian Vail-Leavitt Music Hall today (June 13) with John Pielmeier's drama Agnes of God. The story involves a lapsed-Catholic psychiatrist sent to a convent to determine if a novice is mentally fit for trial. Performances are weekends through June 22; for tickets ($15-$18), call Ticketline at 631-369-4661.

Lightfoot Production Group, a new theater troupe combining professional theater artists with student actors, offers its first workshop production next Wednesday and Thursday evenings, June 18 and 19, at East Hampton's John Drew Theater (in Guild Hall). Performances of Edgar Lee Master's moving series of monologues, Spoon River Anthology, are at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 at the door; call 631-258-2298 for additional information.

Ongoing productions: This is the last weekend to catch Hampton Theatre Company's fine production of the Wood Allen/Elaine May/David Mamet one-act comedies Death Defying Acts at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center (call 631-288-1500 for tickets). The Southampton Players' production of the musical Best Little Whorehouse in Texas is onstage at Southampton College's Avram Theater, playing Friday through Sunday (631-287-8899). This is also the last weekend to see Gateway Playhouse's production of Oklahoma! in Bellport (631-286-1133). Kiss Me Kate opens next Wednesday at Gateway.

MUSIC

Opera of the Hamptons debuts its twelfth season with "A Night in Italy" at Castello di Borghese (Hargrave) Vineyard in Cutchogue on Saturday, 7 p.m. Pietro Mascagni's classic one-act Cavalleria Rusticana will be performed followed by native Italian songs. Wine and light hors d'oeuvres are offered to guests. For tickets ($40-$52), call 631-728-8804 or e-mail Operaofthehamptons@hotmail.com.

Michael Schoen, who rocked the Talkhouse last summer, is back. On a spooky Friday the 13th he will be performing with his new band, The Ohm's. The band was formed in 2000 as a springboard for Schoen's songwriting material. With the inclusion of lead guitar player Michael Capanelli this effort became so much more. Now as a full fledged band they are poised to storm the scene, with an infectious sense of melody and a sonic intensity not seen since the days when rock was pure. The Ohm's are performing with Carbondale from New York City. Carbondale may bring you back to childhood with their bittersweet lyrics and childish style. You can catch The Ohms throughout the summer at VH1 Save The Music, Lalapalooza and Several dates with Carbondale. The Talkhouse show starts at around 8 p.m. and has a $10 cover.

ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Wrong Turn is the wrong movie to see. It was recommended by someone I thought had good judgment who told me it was the scariest movie he had ever seen. I like seeing scary movies about once a year so I decided to go. Most reviewers gave this film the equivalent of two stars out of four. In my opinion, it doesn't deserve one. Yes, it is occasionally scary, but it fails miserably in its attempt to replicate that really fine movie Deliverance.

The film takes place in the forested areas of West Virginia. Chris (Desmond Harrington) looks and acts very much like Josh Hartnett, an up and coming actor. Chris, caught in a traffic jam on his way to an interview, leaves the highway and takes a deserted road. Traveling in the wooded area, he has a car collision and meets the five occupants in the other car. At this point the Deliverance story begins.

Wrong Turn (-)

Three deformed mutants appear conveying Appalachia at its worst. If I lived in West Virginia,

I would be deeply offended by this movie. Some of the other actors are Eliza Dushku, Emmanuelle Chriqui, and Jeremy Sisto. I was not familiar with any of them, but I hope they all get another chance to perform.

The camera work creates some chills and fear, but overall it's just not worth taking the time to see this flick. I think I can still take in a scary movie this year and not violate my vow of no more than one a year.

Before Ed Koch was a film critic for Dan's Papers he was the mayor of New York.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

We find ourselves in hip boots, up to our navels in a $35 million mansion in lovely downtown Venice. With Michaelangelo fervor, Mark Wahlberg and, his mentor, old-timer Donald Sutherland, are painting the ceilings. Not with naked muscular bodies but instead, with something more explosive \\\ explosive paints! What will they think of next? Gee, to think of it, maybe Diego Rivera painted his mural in Rockefeller Center with it to make it easy for Nelson et pere to demolish it. It's the new slick as a greasy French fry, thick-with-thieves heist movie, The Italian Job. Everything begins well – for a thief at least. The ceilings collapse and the vault holding shiny, expensive gold bars, goes to pieces, as does the sociopathic gang member who queers the deal and makes off with the gold, leaving the others for dead. Where do you go with all that gold, especially if you're quirky, mentally off the chain Ed Norton? I know I'd go to Los Angeles. You know that $35 mil buys a nice meal on La Brea. It doesn't take Wahlberg long to figure this out. Also, there's a secret weapon, Sutherland's sexy, wise-cracking, safe-cracking daughter, Charlize Theron (thumpa\\thumpa, be still my aroused heart), who will crack the gold's location. Vo den? You were expecting maybe, Noel Coward, who co-starred with Michael Caine in the original movie, of which this caper was reconstituted.

Five (continued from page 94)

tor Diane Keaton will be at East End Books & Music at 53 The Circle, East Hampton, on Sunday from 2-3 p.m. to autograph her new book Clown Paintings (sales benefit ARF – Animal Rescue Fund of the Hamptons). Southampton's Parrish Art Museum offers a guided tour of famous Gilded Age architects' buildings, "McKim, Mead and White in Eastern Long Island," next Thursday, June 19, from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. (Lunch included—$65 members, $85 guests; call 631-283-2118).

The Italian Job & Finding Nemo

Demanding of all remakes of heist capers, is that they be much more capricious than their forebears and, this heist finale is about as forebearing as possible. Mini Coopers are the chosen weapon of the getaway. They can go where bigger vehicles don't dare to go! What was that little bug that just flew by?

Miss Charlize comes up first and foremost. Norton's weasely sneak is riding on five previous film performances. Mark Wahlberg's performance is even more wooden than his Boogie Nights' porn star appearance. (No pun particularly intended.) As for The Italian Job itself, you will be amazed at how cleverly movies can be made to appear these days. When you walk out of the popcorn littered theatre, you'll realize your wallet's been lifted. The soggy crunch under your feet will remind you of the trash you can't easily avoid.

You can travel the world over, through oceans and seas or, through the air and overland; you will not find anything as Gleem\\clean, refreshingly

American as the new Pixar computer animated adventures of fish. Yeah, those scaly, bubbly things with fins and such. Unlike most pandering animated features, Finding Nemo speaks of the rebelliousness of youth, and the fears of experience of the father. It doesn't flinch. Its most comical characters are sharks. The great white, Bruce, is enrolled in a 12-step program \\ he is hooked on fish! He has to learn that fish are friends, not food. It's tough for him to let one swim by. Yum, yum, describes this delicious, scrumptiously alive diversion. Alive seems an odd description for a film made up of tiny, pixilated dots. It's kind of Seurat Pointilism taken to its nth degree. It is important to realize that the fusion of a wonderful story with artful perfection is what breathes life into the color saturated creatures. When I indicated, Finding Nemo is a thoroughly American movie, I didn't mean in the red, white and blue sense. It is in the full, loose, carefree spectrum of free-flowing spontaneity, swirled into unmatched technical skill. In its ability to be free, it excludes no one their hopes and ideals.

Galerie West

It is hard to miss Galerie West as you turn off of Main Street onto Moniebogue Lane in Westhampton Beach. The bright lighting inside makes the lovely garden in front invitingly serene. The colorful artistic contents on the walls inside beckon even on the dullest of evenings. Saturday night was no exception and although the rain took its toll on the number of gallery goers, it did not take away from the creative talent concealed inside.

Upon entering the main room of the gallery, those in attendance viewed the contemporary works of environmentalist, poet and featured artist of the evening Jean DuQuoc. Inspired by the landscapes of France, DuQuoc's paintings are as colorful as they are unique.

"My stories tell the story of the present time, of landscapes, and of people," DuQuoc tells me. "The red sun is an important theme throughout my works. It is a message to humanity."

As I looked into each painting I found myself mesmerized by the reds, the oranges, and the yellows of beautiful sunsets.

Leaving the room of DuQuoc, the gallery extended further into other rooms containing the works of many other famous artists and photographers. In the company of fine art consultant Robert R. Deets I toured the rest of the gallery and viewed the works of artists such as Pedro Guerrero, Zalmski, Jamali, and Anne Packard. All differing in style and expression, the unique pieces have one thing in common: they all have a story which inspired their creation and Gallerie West is lucky enough to share these stories with its visitors.

As the gallery grows and takes shape I can only imagine it will become more beautiful. Though there is still much to be done and construction of the gallery is still underway, owners Arma Andon and Claude Villani have four more exhibitions planned for this summer which will feature artists including Jamali, Luke Leestemaker, Eng Tay, and Anne Packard. Visiting the gallery is truly a pleasant experience with a friendly atmosphere. Whether you are an artist yourself or just interested in viewing the innovative works of artists known worldwide, Gallerie West has much to offer. In the rain or the sun it is a trip worth taking. —Melissa Weingart

About Face....with Annette

REDHEADS

With summer quickly approaching you are going to see everything under the sun for blondes, from shampoos to haircolor and their effects to makeup.. Redheads are one group that have been pushed aside, ignored, and just not addressed for a long time. Makeup companies somehow expect them to fall somewhere in the blonde categories if they are fair and sort of strawberry colored and to the brunette lines for the burgundies and wines. It just doesn't cut it. True, some redheads can get away with pink, but not many. First of all, reds (for short herein) usually have fair skin, with freckles to boot. If you are going to put makeup on that minimizes the freckles, you are going to have to fill coverage, and heaven forbid you see a line of demarcation. I had to choose a lighter foundation, applied with a mixture of a little water and moisturizer with an SPF of at least 15, to just give the skin a wash, not to entirely block out the freckles. A light dusting of powder on the nose, cheeks and forehead is all that is needed to keep off the bouncing light.

What I often see with some reds are eyelashes that look either too dark or as though they need a touch up, because their owners have not gotten close enough to the base of the lashes! Too many reds also try to darken their brows because they are usually so fair making them too dark. A very good color for those reds is a ginger gold or ginger red in a powder or soft pencil. Just a fill in with powder if they are light may be all that is needed. Using a good angled brush is a must. The same goes for mascara. Black,

Black/Brown is a mortal sin to a redhead. It looks terrible if you are fair. If you dye your hair with the burgundy/wine shades, of course you can get away with it but not if you are light-toned.

There is a company appropriately named Just For Redheads that is hailed as providing the finest in products for redheads. It was founded by Paula Pennypacker, a former radio host and contender for mayor of Toledo, Ohio, and a redhead herself. According to her husband, Duane Abbaay, he was having dinner with this gorgeous flaming redhead when he stopped dead in his tracks and asked her why she has red hair and black eyes. The rest is history. They went on and got married and launched Just For Redheads, a company that is now red hot!

They offer over 100 products in colors ranging from Matte Toast Lipstick to Ginger Red Mascara. According to Pennypacker: "Generally, JFR defines two main categories: Strawberry Blondes (pale lashes) and Auburn (darker lashes). From there we then recognize four major groups: Champagne, Strawberry Blond, Red, and Auburn. As every redhead is unique, we provide a personal consultation to determine the JFR products that will maximize the natural beauty of each redhead."

If you do not have access to a computer, I suggest you find yourself a computer cafe and get online to take full advantage of this company and its fabulous products. Their web site is www.justforredheads.com. The prices are all within a normal range and sometimes products are even on sale.

Redheads are no longer being forced to wear blondes makeup or brunettes blush thanks to this company reds are unique and now have a line of their own!

Golden Rules For A Flawless Summer Tan

Lets face it. After a winter of hibernating, we want to approach the summer looking our best. What better way to feel fabulous than with a glowing summer tan. Those who are cancer-conscious are bronzing with safe, sunless chemical tanners. With an explosion of new self-tanning products on the market, one can achieve convincing color, without the harmful UV and UVB rays. These products come in a multitude of forms including, foam, spray, gel, lotion, and milk. To avoid a beauty meltdown, even on the hottest days, I am going to give you the latest on the best sunless tanning methods.

How these tanning agents work.

The active ingredient in virtually all sunless tanning formulas is called, dihydroxyacetone, or more commonly DHA. When DHA is applied to the skin, it causes a chemical reaction with the amino acids in the skin to produce a tan, much like the sun, without the harmful effects.

Foam Fun

If you are looking for a quick fix, foam allows for a fairly easy application. With a toned tint, it is easy to see where the product has been applied in order to avoid streaks. The foam absorbs into the skin and easily dries. It has a tendency to lay and darken in dry areas of the skin and in the creases of your body, so be careful when applying! An easy way to avoid this hassle is to use a sponge paintbrush to apply. Not only will the sunless tan turn out even, but the bronzer will look great, especially on legs. One of the most recommended foams is Neutrogena's Instant Bronze. This product dries fast, has minimal odor, and works well on the face and neck. Like the Instant Bronze Lotion, the color disappears in a few days, which makes it a good choice for beginners!

Gel of the Ball

When looking for facial tanning gel, it is important to consider your skin type. If you have rather sensitive skin, oil-free, fragrance-free products are your best choice. For a fast drying facial fix, try Au Courant Bronze Face Gel Copper. Just apply a few drops with your fingertips to each section of the face. Although it appears to be extremely dark in the bottle it spreads on sheer.

Spray Away!

When searching for the right spray, it is important to pay attention to the spray mechanisms. The best tanning sprays are those with pressure consistency. If the spray mechanism is really good, it will allow you to spray upside down for those hard to reach places. Clinique's Self-Sun Body Self-Tanning Mist is a great spray product that can be found in most department stores. The color is a medium/dark brown and it sprays very evenly.

Air-care

The most recent revolution in self-tanning is the airbrush method. Although once exclusive to celebrities, salons are opening across the country and are becoming easily accessible to the average person. These visits can cost as little as thirty dollars and range as high as one hundred and sixty. Using the same method that is used to paint your car, special tanning salons are now able to paint your body with an airbrush and a small compressor. The only hassle involved with this method is finding a salon close by. While you might prefer to wear your bathing suit during this process, your birthday suit is also acceptable. After the spraying process, you stand in front of a fan for five to ten minutes while the solution dries. Voila! You leave the salon with a natural looking golden brown tan that is safe and lasts for as long as nine days.

Fatty Impasta, Meat Your Destiny

Although The Atkins diet and other low-carb diets have been on the market for over twenty-five years, they have made their strongest impression among American dieters in the past five years. Why the change of heart? Well, scientific and clinical research has recently confirmed the benefits of low-carb dieting bringing these weight loss programs both popularity and respect.

The Atkins diet is all about eating foods with low amounts of carbohydrates and sugars. For those already on the diet, you know that limiting your intake of calories is not the only way to lose weight. When you control carbohydrate consumption sufficiently, your body will switch from burning glucose, derived from carbohydrates to burning mostly fats. This diet is easy to follow, and provides you with a wide variety of foods to choose from. Foods typically associated with fine dining become part of your daily regimen. Veal with white wine caper sauce, eggplant parmesan and your classic cheeseburger are all entrees that are acceptable on the low carb program. Despite the obvious breadless, sugar-free options, what about all the other stuff? Drinks, sweets, etc? Low carbohydrate food companies have all ready come up with some exciting solutions. While Sweet n' Low and Equal were some of the only sugar substitutes on the market a few years ago, a new sweetener called Xylitol has recently made its debut in low-carb goods. Unlike the original sweeteners, Xylitol has no after-taste and has had no suggested links to cancer. Brownies, milkshakes, chocolate bars, cereals and breads are among the variety of sugar free, low-carb products out there. Atkins, Carbolite, and Pure Delite are a few companies successfully selling these products.

In the Hamptons, a person can embark on the low-carb dieter's journey with ease. Second Nature is a great place to shop for your basic low-carb needs. They sell everything from bread mixes to chocolate milk shakes. A good amount of low-carb, sugar free products can also be found at GNC and the Vitamin Shop. If your busy schedule does not allow you to make the extra trip, just check out what your local supermarket has. Typically you can find a good successfully do the diet. It also discusses health, well-being, disease prevention, and finally low carb foods and recipes. Like Atkins, most low-carb diets suggest a maximum intake of twenty carbohydrates a day. In following these guidelines, it is important to be selective about the foods that you choose for some have many more carbohydrates than others.

While on a low-carb diet, one can enjoy the typical foods that they always have with a few minor revisions. In the morning, a cheese omelet with ham and toast made with Atkin's Advantage bread mix and No Carb Gourmet's ketchup could be the meal of choice. If something sweeter tickles one's fancy, then they might have a Morning Start blueberry breakfast bar. Lunchtime might consist of creamy seafood salad, a vegetable and a diet soda. For dinner flounder with a tossed green salad would be an acceptable choice.

At this point, those who have an unforgiving sweet tooth are patiently waiting to hear about what is for dessert. To the chocolate lover, it seems implausible that a sugar free treat would meet their cravings sufficiently. It actually can happen! Asher's has a heavenly Liquid Carmel bar that has only 1.4 grams of carbs and zero sugars. Other delicious delights include Indulgence Mint Crisp bars and Pure De-lite Dark chocolate bars.

amount of low carb products in the sugar free section. Be sure to stock up on Crystal Light while you are there! This tasty drink comes in a variety of refreshing flavors that will keep you satisfied throughout the day. Finally, if you are still having trouble finding what you want, go to locarbdrin.com and have the products shipped directly to your door.

Whether you are planning to begin the Atkins diet, or another form of it, The New York Times best-seller, Dr. Atkins New Diet Revolution, is a highly recommended read. The book talks about how Atkins works and how to

Haven: A Heaven For Home Decorators

Just around the corner from the Giant Bait and Tackle store on Main Street is a paradise for home decorators. Haven, Montauk's new 2400-square foot home furnishing store, opened this past Memorial Day weekend and has been wowing customers with its blend of eclectic and chic furnishings and gifts at very reasonable prices.

Haven's welcoming sign and quirky window displays reflect the store's dual style. The clear blue writing elegantly pronounces vintage home furnishings and gifts. The comfortable hammock and giant fake fish hanging in the store's front windows suggest that it is with a sense of humor and grace that Haven professes to cater to its clients. It is both classic and cool, poised and funky.

Kathi Cogen, Haven's owner, moved out to Montauk last summer looking for a way to bring her retail experience to the East End. A former buyer for Bloomingdales, she and her surfer husband found a place for their store in Montauk's expanding commercial district. Haven's home is the new building in town, just one block from the beach. Crisp and clean with a yoga studio on its top floor, 83 South Elmwood is the perfect place for a store that specializes in equipping its customers with unique vintage pieces and tasteful Shabby Chic Furniture.

Cogen's two visions for the store are revealed not only in its façade but also in the two large rooms that displays Haven's merchandise. In the first room, white chandeliers rewired, repainted, and recrystalled with Swarovski gems sparkle against the distressed American pieces from the 1930s to the 1950s and the Shabby Chic line. Those interested in purchasing a sofa, chair, or chaise from the Shabby Chic collection are presented with a variety of swatches and styles from which they can custom order furniture.

In addition to these pieces, the first room offers customers smaller gifts and furnishings ranging from beach bags and beaded sarongs to vintage lamps and iron gates. Picture frames from a Californian company have already sold out and are being reordered. Tea glasses and holders from Morocco sit beside pottery and on top of antique dressers. Cogen also carries Red Flower Candles, which burn for forty-five hours and feature travel sets that come with matches, soaps that come with their own dishes, and potpourri.

"I travel to auctions, shows, and flea markets all over the Northeast," says Cogen. She estimates that 90% of the furniture in the store is vintage, purchased and carried to Montauk on her 14-foot trailer or truck. Since the store's Memorial Day opening she's been selling a lot of big pieces and gifts. "I want people to come in and feel comfortable buying," says Cogen. She feels that the store's Montauk prices, in addition to its diverse offerings, have been inspiring chatter about Haven and attracting the customers. Indeed, on the day of my visit, a customer was inquiring about a hula dancer lamp she had heard of from a friend. Sadly, it was already sold, but another was being ordered.

That type of unusual piece can be found in Haven's second room. A chandelier-lit hallway leads to a Tiki lounge featuring funky hammocks, straw mats, Moroccan screens, clocks, and colorful beach bags

Photos Of Fido

Deborah Kalas wants to take a picture of your pet. An East Hampton photographer with an MFA and a penchant for four-legged folk, Kalas has combined a 25-year career in photography, which has found her work in the pages of LIFE, People, and New York magazine, with her love of pets. She does, after all, own a dog, a horse, and two cats from the Animal Rescue Fund (ARF). This June and July, when you hire Kalas to create a portrait of your dog, cat, or horse, she will donate 10% to ARF.

Kalas's home studio is lined with her photos. Of course, she has some human subjects too. She specializes in family portraits and wedding pictures. However, it's the pictures of canines Fletcher, Elliot, Evil, and Buttercup that she proudly shows to displays how well she can capture the photogenic spirit of animals. "I have something in mind all the time," Kalas says of her pet photo shoots. She works mostly on location, but will also take a studio portrait of your Maxwell or Cody if you so desire.

Kalas welcomes the frenzy that can accompany a pet photo shoot. "They don't have to necessarily sit and be still," she says. "I use the dog's energy; some dogs need to be moving." Though she admits with a smile that some pet subjects can be somewhat reluctant to pose, she recalls a chocolate lab that kept drinking sea-water and getting sick during his photo session at the beach. "Sometimes it appears in the beginning that there's utter chaos," she laughs. "But I welcome the chaos, because it appears very natural."

Pet owners can have Kalas create a single portrait, a storyboard that includes a combination of pictures, or even a custom leather-bound book of photos to keep in the library. Owners can pose with their pets or coach them through the experience. "I recently did a black lab whose owner had such a wonderful rapport with him," Kalas says. "No leash. No collar. All she would do was talk to the dog and he would make different facial expressions." It seems that this particular black lab was more of a photo star and less of a sea-water gulper.

(which, the store owner proudly says, are doing very well). A bamboo furniture set has already sold out, but Cogen has been steadily attending other auctions to replace all that customers have purchased. Big vintage pieces, outdoor furnishings, and kitchen and bathroom set ups, are placed intermittently throughout the room. And as for the giant fish in the window,

Cogen's husband won it at an auction. "My husband used to fish," she says and adds with a laugh, "We paid too much for it. It's not for sale."

That piece of sentimental value aside, everything else in Haven is available for purchase and free gift wrap and local delivery in Montauk. (There is a minimal fee for delivery elsewhere in the Hamptons.)

Haven, the newest addition to the East End's home design offerings, is not only resplendent with merchandise but also provides an utterly charming way to spend an afternoon.

Water Water Everywhere At Landscape Pleasures

You've seen Betsey Johnson's clothing line, but have you ever seen her pool? This weekend at the nineteenth annual Landscape Pleasures, the Parrish Art Museum's annual weekend-long garden spectacular, Johnson's pool and garden, along with six others, will be the subjects of day-long garden tours.

The theme of this year's event, which commences with a meeting on Saturday, June 14, is water. Symposium guests will be treated to a continental breakfast and discussions led by renowned speakers on topics ranging from the historic uses of fountains, to the design of water features in the garden, to trends of global warming and its effects on water.

Author Marilyn Symmes will explore fountains, from the Renaissance to the present as they satisfy human needs for physical and spiritual refreshment. Peter Kopik, Design Director of the California-based firm WET Design, will discuss the craft of using water in a variety of designs and locations. His firm's projects have included the 2002 Water Olympics Cauldron in Salt Lake City and the Fountains of Bellagio at The Bellagio Hotel in Las Vegas. Prize-winning journalist and author Andrew C. Revkin, who writes for The New York Times, will focus on the changing climate and its possible causes and implications for the region and the planet. Finally, landscape architect Perry Guillot will share a brief overview of the gardens featured on the tours. Saturday's activities will close with a reception held at the home of Sandy and Stephen Perlbinder. Their original house is one of the first designed by Norman Jaffe in the Hamptons, and was built just behind the dunes in Sagaponack in 1969.

Sundays' events include self-guided tours, which will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. They feature seven private gardens with stunning landscapes and swimming pools at the homes of designer Betsey Johnson, artist Ross Bleckner, who lives in the former home of Truman Capote, architect Deborah Berke and Dr. Peter McCann, Christopher Browne, Millie and Arne Glimcher, Sam Shahid, and Michael Trokel. Each landscape is subtly shaped through a combination of carefully planned design and textured planting that reflect the personalities of their owners and the expertise of their skilled designers. Streams of hostas, irises, astilbes, and ferns are lined with sculptures by Joan Miro, Henry Moore, Louis Nevelson, Lucas Samaras, Julian Schnable, Joel Shapiro, and Wilem deKooning. A gazebo topped with a tutu-clad goddess sits in a garden packed with flowers in shades of pink and purple. Gardens, terraces, and pools compliment modern architecture and country estates. What better way to enjoy some of the East End's most spectacular private homes and gardens than to spend a weekend with Landscape Pleasures?

– Meredith Levine

Admission to the program is $125 and $100 for museum members, and includes both the symposium and the garden tours. All proceeds benefit the museum's ongoing educational programs. For additional information or to purchase tickets, please contact the Parrish Art Museum at 631-283-2118, ext. 33.

Southampton Rose Society: Everything's Coming Up Roses...

Twenty-seven years ago the Southampton Rose Society was formed with a small group of people who were dedicated to the culture of roses. Since that time the Society has grown and with its increasing membership has been able to accomplish various civic projects, offer scholarships to students and hold its annual rose show for the education and enjoyment of everyone.

The Society's most visible undertaking is the recent creation of a rose garden on the grounds of the new Rogers Memorial Library, 91 Coopers Farms Road in Southampton at 2 p.m., that will give everyone that passes through an opportunity to "stop and smell the roses". Anyone can apply for membership.

On Saturday, June 14, there will be a dedication ceremony of the Southampton Rose Society Rose Garden to the village of Southampton. The speakers at the ceremony will be Spencer Dworkin, President of the SRS, Debra Engelhardt, Director of the Rogers Memorial Library and Mayor Joseph P. Romanosky, Jr.

C.Z. Guest, noted horticulturist, author, and columnist with her own website www.c.z.guest.com where one can purchase her scented candles, scented soaps and even bug spray. After the dedication ceremony C.Z. will be autographing her latest book, "Garden Talk...ask me anything". Helga Dawn, a consulting rosarian, who with her late husband David Dawn owned LaRoseraie on Ox Pasture Road in Southampton where their glorious rose gardens with over 2,000 species of roses drew visitors from all over the world from royalty to the common gardener who shared an interest in the culture of roses. Their gardens appeared in many magazines, such as Architectural Digest, and in many books alongside some of the premier rose gardens in this country such as, Beautiful American Rose Gardens by Mary Tonetti Dorra. They were awarded the prestigious Garden Club of America award among others.

The cocktail party fundraiser for completion and maintenance of the rose garden will be held on Saturday, July 19, from 6 - 8 p.m. at "Fairfield" the home of Hilary Geary on Great Plains Road in Southampton. There will be music by Tony O'Blaney and his group and "Art of Eating" will cater event. There will be a raffle and silent auction. C.Z. Guest and Helga Dawn are Honorary Chairpersons for the upcoming summer fundraiser for the purpose of completion and maintenance of the rose garden, which is the only public garden of its kind on the East End of Long Island. Co-Chairpersons are Adeline Christie and Jane Indoe.

The calendar of events for the balance of 2003 is as follows:

Inundation Education

There are few things worse than inviting friends out for the weekend only to find that Mother Nature has played a cruel joke on you. Instead of slathering on sunscreen for fun by the pool or a day at the beach, you're faced with rain, crankiness, and potentially doltifying boredom. There are, however, ways of remedying a washed-out weekend. Prepare some comfort foods, keep the adults entertained with wine and spirits, the kids mesmerized by board games, and everyone in awe of an in-house specialist.

Throw an impromptu dinner party. You had planned on sitting out at Ricardo's, but that's not likely given the inch of rain that's fallen since you arrived. It's cold and wet, and your guests are getting nudgy. Pull out the red checked tablecloth and prepare for a dinner replete with comfort foods. The menu: fried chicken, cole slaw, corn bread, and any type of pie your heart desires. Nobody will complain of boredom when they're full of good eats; it's the perfect summertime fix-it meal. Go to Schmidt's Brigdehampton Country Store, Cromer's Market or Schmidt's East Hampton for the fried chicken. The cole slaw, that creamy fatty kind you find at a big supermarket, will come from King Kullen in Bridgehampton or try Cittarella or Barefoot Contessa for lux slaw. And while you're there, pick up a box of corn bread mix (the kids can make it). If you're feeling like more of a gourmet, you'll want to buy freshly made corn muffins. Try Jessie's bakery in the Springs, Tates in Southampton, or Breadzilla and remember to purchase a pie before you leave.

As an add-on to the meal and another rainy day boredom repellent, keep the adults happy with a few bottles of wine. Keep it fresh and flowing. You'll soon forget that you've rented during the雨iest, wettest June you can remember. Or that you're stuck in a hotel/motel with friends and/or relatives. Or that you opened the pool only to find that no one's been able to use it. Wines by Morell, Zabi's, McNamara's or Amagansett Wine and Spirits will take care of your rainy day blues, but keep in mind that they'll be closed on Sunday.

Board games may not be as technologically advanced (or expensive) as your kid's new X-Box, but they can entertain young and old alike. After you've had your share of foodstuff, pour another glass and prepare to test your wits and trivia skills in several rounds of Scattergories, Trivial Pursuit (in all its variations), Cranium, Scrabble, Jenga or Monopoly. Whether it's a battle among families, battle between the young and old, or battle of the sexes, nothing beats a pitiful day indoors like a good ol' fashioned board game. Try Kay-Bee Toys or Kmart, both in the Bridgehampton Commons.

If you're really creative, or perhaps really desperate, call for in-home entertainment. Call a psychic. Call for a massage. Check out the classified section of Dan's Papers and get the number of a music masseuse that will make house calls. Try to relax. And remember, on particularly blistering days, the pavement parking lots at the beach will be too hot to walk on barefoot. You and your guests will travel to a tanning/relaxation area on the shore wearing canvas sneakers that will quickly fill with sand. You'll swim, you'll sun, you'll eat ice cream and enjoy all that a lovely, sunny summer day in the Hamptons has to offer. Unfortunately, those days are not quite here. In the meantime, plan accordingly.

Police Blotter

East Hampton Town Police were called to the Springs School grounds last week. Some kids were at the courts jumping for a basketball when they found themselves ducking from B.B.'s. Apparently another student drove by in his pickup truck and pointed a B.B. gun at them. He then shot a round and hit one of the kids in the back. The youth was not injured and police were able to track down the boy with the B.B. gun and arrest him on charges of Menacing in the second degree. He was later released on an appearance ticket, waiting for a court date.

* * *

Police reported another loose canon in East Hampton last week. This time, instead of a shot fired, it was a lost gun. A Water's Edge Road man reported to police that he couldn't find his 9mm handgun. He said the last time he saw it was about four years ago. Police searched with the man but came up with nothing.

* * *

If missing guns and children shooting children isn't scary enough, this next incident is. A pilot attempting to land at Montauk Airport on East Lake Drive found himself off course after what he said was a crosswind obstructed his landing. A woman who witnessed the crash called police. An East Hampton Town officer and the Montauk Fire Chief responded to investigate the crash scene. When they arrived, the pilot and passenger were outside the slightly damaged plane and declined any medical attention. Police contacted the FAA for a mandatory investigation.

* * *

The owner of a gas station in East Hampton called police last Tuesday after a man she knows came by and pumped $46.00 worth of gas into some gas cans and left without paying. She told police she would confront him and that she didn't want to press charges at the time, she just wanted the incident on record.

* * *

Police responded to a couple bars in Montauk this past week (I love the element of surprise). The first stemmed from a fight that had occurred at the Lakeside Inn where the victim left by the time police arrived. The owner of the bar and several witnesses were able to give enough information to result in the arrest of the subject. The next call to the cops came from an employee of the Tipperary Inn who said there was a very disturbed, suspicious woman walking around. When police arrived, according to the employee the woman had hopped in a cab and took off west bound. The officer was able to locate the cab and pull it over. The woman was questioned but wasn't able to give her name or where she wanted to go, due to her level of tipsiness. She did however manage to muster up the inebriated strength to punch the officer in the chest. She was quickly taken into custody and held overnight.

Dan's Letters

POXY PLEA

Dear Dan,

I have received numerous e-mails from Michael O'Neill urging democrats to oppose the purchase of Poxabogue. Although I am sure his heart is in the right place, I also believe that he is perhaps blinded to issues that do not pertain to affordable housing.

Poxabogue is a unique and important recreational facility in a land being swallowed up by developers. It can never be replaced. If it disappears, we will lose yet another component of the old Hamptons landscape that is dear – and near – to many of us who have watched sadly, as one by one, the old way of life disappears. We must not allow developers' greed and completely unrelated issues compromise the need to save Poxabogue.

Thank you.

THE GIRL WITH THE PAINTED DRESS

Dear Dan,

Last year my wife and I were shopping at Waldbaums in Rocky Point. We were at the checkout counter with my assuming the usual husband assignment of bagging while my wife scrutinized the price of every item scanned. Momentarily distracted from my assignment duties, I glanced behind me at some enlarged photographs on the wall depicting scenes from Rocky Point during the 1930s and 40s. One of the pictures was of a view of Broadway during that era, which is the main street that runs through the business district of town. The photo, entitled "Broadway Circa 1930" had several cars and pedestrians in it. Upon closer inspection I observed that one of the figures in the photo appeared to be that of a young woman standing next to another woman. The photo was not very clear and somewhat distorted, maybe as a result of the enlargement process. Be that as it may, it appeared to me that the young woman in the photo was naked! Now I knew that this could not possibly be the case since the picture was of a main drag in town during the middle of the day. To the best of my knowledge, public nudity was not in vogue in Rocky Point during the 1930's.

I brought this discovery to the attention of both my wife and the cashier. After looking at the photo they also agreed with my perception that this figure did appear to be unclothed right in the middle of downtown Rocky Point. The consensus was that this apparent anomaly was the result of the photo enlargement process. On our way home in the car, my wife and I talked about this oddity. At one point in the conversation I suggested to my wife that I could go to Waldbaums to remove the photograph from the wall by invoking public decency as a reason. She laughed and doubled the public atmosphere in the country during this time-frame. On almost a daily basis the media was highlighting stories about sex abuse scandals that involved a few priests in the Catholic Church. Other high profile sex abuse cases were also being played out in the media on almost a daily basis during this period. There was an element of public hysteria in the air at the time. I decided to take up my wife's challenge as a lesson in how, under the right circumstances, intelligent and otherwise rational people could be persuaded to do things that others might think were ridiculous. My wife and I had a little friendly wager between us.

Writing in a very serious tone as a "concerned member of the community," I corresponded with the manager of the store, Anthony Pagani, and expressed my concern about the photo and requested that this store "in the interest of preserving public decency, remove the offending photo from public view."

About a week after I sent the letter I received a telephone call from a Natalie Aurucci Stiebel who identified herself as a member of the Rocky Point Historical Society. She also writes a column called "Looking Back At Rocky Point" for one of the local papers, The Community Journal. She related to me that the store manager contacted her after receiving my letter because the original photo that was the basis for the enlargement in question came from her collection. She is apparently an historian of the community and has even written a book about Rocky Point. Mrs. Stiebel assured me that the original photo showed that the woman was fully clothed and suggested that some type of distortion must have occurred during the enlargement process. I persisted with my argument that we could not take any chances and that even the perception of such an indecent image needed to be addressed. I reminded her that the community needed to be ever vigilant about such matters.

To my astonishment she agreed. Her plan was to have a well-known local artist friend of hers Temina Gezari, alter the photo in order to make it more presentable for public viewing. She asked me if this would be an acceptable alternative to removing the photo entirely? I indicated that it would and thanked her for her efforts on behalf of community.

At this point in time the whole affair was starting to get interesting. I had previously read about the artist she mentioned who would be doing the alteration of the photo. Temina Gezari is in her 90's and has a studio and gallery in Rocky Point. She also has a national reputation for her artwork.

About a week after my conversation with Mrs. Steifel, I visited the store to do some shopping. We observed that the photo had been returned to its original location. Upon closer inspection we discovered that a dress had clearly been painted over the image of the naked woman. To this day, nearly a year later, the altered photo continues to hang at Waldbaums as a testament to my having prevailed over my wife in our little wager. I never fail to remind her of its presence whenever we shop at the store. Her response to my little digs during checkout time is usually to tell me to "stop gloating and pay attention to bagging those groceries."

What lessons do we take from this story? All of us should be vigilant in order to safeguard the community. However, we can sometimes overreact, rush to judgement and allow hysteria to take the place of common sense. Fortunately, Waldbaums was not exhibiting classical works or we may have ended up with a terry cloth bathrobe painted on a nude! The other lesson here is that there are some really good and decent people in this world who will go to great lengths for the benefit of their community.
